Ottawa sets 3-year restraint

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canadians face two to three years of restraint before the Conservative government will be able to clean up a decade of Liberal economic mismanagement, Finance Minister John Crosbie said today.

He could not promise any "economic miracles to change around the Canadian economy overnight," Crosbie added.

The government probably will announce the first of its restraint programs later this week, he said.

Crosbie defended his decision to raise the Bank of Canada's prime lending rate by half a per cent Sunday to a record high of 11.75 per cent, charging that the Liberal government ran the economy out of control and allowed successive bank interest increases.

"In the present situation we had to act quickly and increase the rates. If we hadn't acted, the downward trend on the Canadian dollar would have been hard to stop."

He said the country this year is headed towards a $7-billion deficit in its trade in goods and services with the rest of the world. That would be a sharp increase from the $5.2-billion deficit in the "current account" recorded last year.

The need to keep investment flowing in to offset the chronic current account deficit was cited as a major reason for the move which caused banks and mortgage companies to raise their lending rates.

In spite of the move, which followed a similar rise in U.S. interest rates last week, the dollar dropped more than one-fifth of a cent on currency markets Monday to 85.76 cents U.S.

Canada had a record $3.5-billion surplus in its trade in goods with the rest of the world in 1978. But this was more than offset by payments for services such as shipping, dividend payments to foreigners and spending on foreign travel.

The result was the record $5.2-billion "current account" deficit.

This surplus of Canadian dollars abroad was the major reason for their decline in value. The Bank of Canada used its foreign currency reserves to buy Canadian dollars in an attempt to arrest the decline.

The central bank was forced to arrange loans from domestic and foreign banks to replenish the reserves.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark has informed U.S. President Jimmy Carter that in the coming weeks the Canadian government will be announcing the broad lines of its energy program to ensure a "rapid reduction" in Canada's dependence on foreign oil.

The program will move this country "effectively toward energy self-sufficiency," the prime minister assured the president.

"I am confident these measures will enable our country to meet and even improve upon our Tokyo summit goals," he told Carter in a letter made public today.

MPs back Oct. 9

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark has decided to call Parliament Oct. 9, giving "the highest possible priority" to legislation to remove secrecy from government operations, Progressive Conservative House Leader Walter Baker announced today.

Another priority for the minority government is reforming the rules of Parliament so MPs will have more power to bring the government to account, Baker said.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer will open the 31st Parliament when he delivers his first throne speech, outlining the legislative program of the first Conservative government since John Diefenbaker's administration was defeated in 1963.

"We will be able to say to Parliament, for the first time in a long time, 'these are the bills we intend to introduce'," Baker said.

He said economic legislation would be near the top of the list, but that the government did not intend immediately to introduce a bill to abolish Petro-Canada, a Conservative proposal during the campaign for the May 22 election.

Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen criticized the government for delaying the opening of Parliament

It's now or never for tube entries

Tube race

It's the last chance to mail entries for the Great Inner Tube Race which will take place Sunday in the Gorge.

All entries should be in the mailbox by midnight tonight in order to guarantee delivery in time.

Entries can continue to be brought in, in person, to the Victoria Times, or to a participating sporting goods or hardware store until close of business Wednesday. Some locations will be able to receive entries up to collection time which is Thursday noon.

Downtown - Ray's Sports Centre, 1692 Douglas.

Oak Bay - Oak Bay Sporting Goods, 2077 Oak Bay.

Gorge - Premier Sports & Cycle, 2965 Tillicum.

Colwood, Langford - Alexander's Sporting Goods, 2244 Sooke.

Sooke - Westbrook Sooke Hardware, 2038 Otter Point.

Sidney - Harvey's Sporting Goods, 7485 Beacon.

The race is in three sections: men, women and mixed. Trophies for first, second, and third are presented in each section.

There will be a parade of contestants immediately before the race and parade trophies are also awarded in three categories: men, women and mixed.

Spectators will get a good view of the race either at the finish line or from the park across the Gorge. Because race markers will force contestants far to the left, there will be a close-up view for spectators along Gorge Road.

Check-in time for contestants at Gorge Park is noon. The parade begins from the finish line at 12:30 p.m. The parade ends at Craigflower Bridge, which is the starting point for the race. Races start about 1:15 p.m.

NDP MP harbors refugee

VANCOUVER (CP) — An NDP member of Parliament said Monday he will harbor a Chilean refugee in his home against federal government attempts to deport him.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson said the immigration department is preparing to seize Galindo Madrid and fly him to the east coast to rejoin the ship he abandoned two years ago.

"I am confident that there will be no attempts to violate the sanctity of my home," said Robinson.

He said immigration officials were planning to seize Madrid Monday but he heard of the attempt and extracted a promise from the immigration department that nothing would be done until noon today.

Immigration officials were going to fly Madrid to St. John's, Nfld. to join the Greek freighter Star Pride which he fled in Squamish, B.C., in March, 1977, Robinson said.

Since then Madrid has made repeated attempts to gain political refugee status but all have been refused including a final appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal.

He has been working in a downtown restaurant as a dishwasher and living in Vancouver's West End.

Madrid told a news conference that he fears for his life if he is sent to Chile where he was an active supporter of deposed Socialist President Salvador Allende.

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Commerce workers have sent a note to the labor minister complaining that since 1975 their wages have risen by only 3,175.4 per cent.

The cost of living during the same period has increased by 13,850 per cent under Argentina's world-record inflation rate, the General Confederation of Commercial Employees said Monday.

The group sent the note to Labor Minister Llamil Reston demanding an emergency wage increase to meet "the abysmal drop" in their earnings.

NON-UNION LABOR used last week in construction work at the B.C. Buildings Corporation headquarters in Harbor Square brought out pickets this morning and kept 100 government employees off the job for an hour. The pickets came from the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council which said the work was done by Perma Construction. The non-union work was legal, however, because NDP-introduced legislation requiring government work to be done by union members has been repealed by the Socreds.

Fire hazard idles 1,700

About 1,700 Vancouver Island loggers have been idled as a result of tinder-dry forests.

MacMillan Bloedel spokesman Doug Coupar said today operations at Kelsey Bay, Chemainus and Shawnigan Lake have been shut down.

Two other operations — Sproat Lake and Northwest Bay — have been put on early shift to keep the loggers out of the woods during the hottest part of the day.

About 800 MacBlo employees have been idled.

Nearly 400 B.C. Forest Products employees are off the job as the company has been forced to partially close operations at Renfrew and Caycuse.

A BCFP spokesman said some of the workers are being kept busy on road work and other jobs out of the woods.

He said so far nobody is complaining about the time off work.

"The guys like a little holiday," he said.

However, if the weather continues hot for more than three weeks, then the loggers will begin complaining, he added.

About 125 Rayonier of Canada employees at Jordan River and Gordon River have also been idled.

Meanwhile, B.C. forest fires continue to take their toll, burning more than 9,500 hectares so far this year.

Provincial protection officer Arnold Ginnever said the Kamloops area was hardest hit by the number of fires, with about 700 compared to about 200 at this time last year.

However, he said most of the damage was done in the Prince George area and fires there claimed more than two-thirds of the total timber burned in the province.

More than one thousand men and a battery of equipment, including cats, skidders, helicopters and air tankers, continue to fight the more than 370 fires still burning.

Meanwhile, about 1,400 hectares of bush are burning a few miles west of the Okanogan Valley in Washington state.

About 500 men are fighting the blaze and another 300 firefighters are being brought in from Idaho to check the fire which apparently started in a garage on government land.

Ginnever said all B.C. fires are under control but about six or seven continue to cause crews difficulty and the fire hazard in the Interior is rated extreme with campfire bans still in effect.

Vander Zalm softens stand

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm today tried to play down the cabinet stir he caused Monday by revealing details of the new auto insurance scheme that will end discriminatory rates.

The minister had detailed plans of the Insurance Corp. of B.C. to soften the impact of the loss of revenue that will be created when bad drivers have their records wiped clean so everyone in B.C. will pay the same insurance premium next year.

But today he softened his position, saying he was simply voicing his own opinion based on a common sense analyses of the new legislation.

"I said there would not be a substantial increase in rates next year. I don't think there will be. I was concerned that some headlines last week were giving the impression there would be," he said.

"I was asked if ICBC had enough funds to cover the anti-discrimination program. I said that if ICBC had a good year it would probably have a good surplus of between $15 million and $20 million and common sense dictates that it be used to keep the rates down as low as possible.

"I said that in my opinion safe driver discounts should be discontinued but I didn't say that would be policy.

"It just wouldn't make any sense to keep them going if safe drivers were being compensated by lower rates anyway," he said.

The earlier comments made to a Times reporter and a radio reporter were much stronger and apparently landed the controversial minister in hot water.

The new legislation designed to end all discrimination — age, sex, marital status and geographic location — was introduced in the house last week by deputy premier Grace McCarthy who has responsibility for the government-controlled insurance corporation.

At her press conference, however, reporters were dissatisfied with the meagre details she divulged.

Vander Zalm told the Times on Monday the press had the wrong impression when they reported rates would increase next year as the new program comes on stream.

He said other than normal inflation rates won't go up and explained the fund that will ease any increases over the next five years.

He also said the common

Times News Services

Israeli troops crossed seven kilometres into south Lebanon today on a search-and-destroy mission for Palestinian guerrillas and blew up a house occuped by suspected terrorists.

The attack came in the wake of strong U.S. condemnation of Israeli air strikes against southern Lebanese targets Sunday in which 18 people were reported killed and 50 others injured.

Israeli jets prowled Lebanese skies again Monday but did not attack, while its long-range artillery pounded the battle-scarred south.

Meanwhile, an Israeli foreign ministry spokesman said today that "very intensive contacts" were continuing between Israeli and U.S. representatives to try to reach a compromise solution on the problem of the expiring mandate of the UN peacekeeping force in the Sinai.

The United States Monday took issue with Israel's rejection of a proposal to replace UN Emergency Force peace-keeping troops in the Sinai with lesser-grade UN observers. Israel rejected Washington's complaint.

The differences between Washington and Tel Aviv became public Monday in a series of statements and meetings:

— U.S. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III read a statement which strongly condemned Israeli raids on Palestinian positions Sunday. The department said the raids were killing and wounding innocent victims and raising the potential for more violence in the Middle East.

— Israeli Ambassador to the U.S. Ephraim Evron told reporters after a State Department meeting, "The policy of the Israeli government is quite clear. We will do everything possible in our self-defence."

— Evron also told reporters the United States has a commitment, as part of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, to find an alternative to the UN Expeditionary Force.

The expeditionary force was supposed to have been the principal buffer between the withdrawing Israeli forces and the Egyptian army in the phased return of the Sinai peninsula, but the Soviets have said they would veto the continuation of the force because they object to the treaty itself.

In a related development, the U.S. defence department has taken a major step toward restoring the mobility and firepower of Egypt's army with U.S.-made equipment.

At the same time, the Pentagon plans to strengthen Israel's armored and artillery forces.

Parker puts his foot down

MONTREAL (CP) — It seems you can't even put your foot down these days without somebody running over it.

Take this argument over a downtown Montreal parking spot.

Police said it all began Monday when a man and his wife spied a yawning parking space and decided it was more convenient than the one where they had already left their car.

But a second driver happened along and, ignoring the woman's protests, began jockeying his car into the space.

The first man raced back to assert his rights, but the adamant driver responded by driving over his foot, pinning his toes to the ground. The prisoner pounded so hard on the windshield that it cracked.

The driver went off to find a policeman, who ordered him to remove his car from the other man's foot and told both to find different parking spaces.

Boogie on, Canada, ayatollah's in heat?

OTTAWA (CP) — The disco generation can boogie on.

Culture Minister David MacDonald blurted a startled "you've got to be kidding" today when reporters asked if he plans to follow Iran's lead and ban the broadcasting of music.

He then laughingly added it must have been the effects of the summer heat that prompted the Ayatollah Khomeini to ban music on grounds it is no different than opium.

"It is really hard to say anything that is more extreme than the position the ayatollah has taken," said MacDonald.

He brushed off a tongue-in-cheek suggestion that Canada should press Iran to lift the music ban to open the market for the sales of Canadian recordings.

"We have enough trouble getting the circulation of Canadian music in Canada let alone worrying about sales in Iran," MacDonald said as he left to consider more weighty affairs of state at a cabinet meeting.

'Sheer hell' ends for U.S. yachtsman

FALMOUTH (UPI) - American yachtsman Gerry Spiess today sailed his 10-foot "Yankee Girl" into Falmouth Harbor, completing a 54-day solo crossing of the North Atlantic in the smallest boat ever to complete such a journey.

Spiess, a 39-year-old engineer from White Bear Lake, Minn., arrived at the centre of a welcoming flotilla of honking, tooting pleasure boats that had sailed out to escort him the last few miles to the Cornish coast. Thousands of cheering spectators lined the shores.

Spiess, who left Virginia Beach, Va., June 1, survived two weeks of "sheer hell" during which 20-foot waves pounded the tiny homemade sailboat. He was once swept overboard and only his lifeline saved him.

"Gee I'm glad to be on land again," Spiess said as he emerged from the cockpit of the Yankee Girl dressed in a white sweater and neatly pressed slacks. He appeared a little unsteady on his feet and leaned on his wife, who he greeted with a quick hug, as they were jostled by hordes of reporters and well-wishers.

Spiess stepped ashore just before 9 a.m PDT and went immediately to the local yacht club.

The mayor of Falmouth, Mrs. Olive Smith, prepared to host a reception for Spiess at the Royal Cornwall Yacht Club.

The previous record was set in July 1966, when boatbuilder Bill Verity, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, crossed to Fenit in southwest Ireland in the 12-foot sailing boat "Nonoalca" in 65 days.

Spiess' wife, Sally, 37, and his parents Louis and Jeanette Spiess, sailed out this morning to greet the Yankee Girl. Spiess leaned out of the boat to kiss his wife and said he was not tired after his long journey.

Skylab crash didn't take off for Aussie

An Aussie who was lucky enough to stake his claim in the far outback to a verifiable hunk of Skylab figured his fortune was made. His fortune, maybe — but some things there are that money just can't buy. He recently offered his personal piece of space hardware as barter for tickets to upcoming — and sold out — concerts in Melbourne and Sydney, Australia, by country music queen Dolly Parton. So far — not one taker has he found.

For 26 years, they went their separate ways, but Ruth Johnson of Lowell, Mass., and Allison Mitchell Erb, of Waterville, Maine, finally have gotten together — thanks largely to the Donahue Show. The two women are identical twins — separated at birth and raised by adoptive parents. Each has known in recent years of the other's existence — somewhere — but they've remained strangers. Last month, both happened to be watching the talk show when a guest speaker discussed adopted children and their natural parents. That set them searching for each other and a week ago they met for the first time. Coincidentally, each works now as a hairdresser and each has a daughter named Kristen.

When the U.S. Internal Revenue Service called September Thorpe's 1977 income tax return on the audit carpet, Miss Thorpe very nearly lost her coverage. She's in the cast of the Broadway musical Oh! Calcutta! and she'd written off a $465 deduction — for makeup. New York IRS agent Uta Beidenfeld wasn't buying that. "Why so much?" she wanted to know. Miss Thorpe explained the makeup she uses every night has to cover everything — since nothing else does. "Oh! Calcutta!" is a nude show. Ms. Beidenfeld let the deduction stand — says "I plan to come see the show some night" — just to make sure.

Greek shipping magnate Christina Onassis and her Russian husband are preparing to celebrate their first wedding anniversary where they have spent much of their married life — outside the Soviet Union. Since her marriage last Aug. 1 to Sergei Kauzov, a 38-year-old former bureaucrat, Miss Onassis has spent more time in the West than in Moscow. The couple have been living in Paris, St. Moritz and Athens since early January. She paid a brief visit to Moscow in July and told friends she did not expect to return before autumn.

It isn't known what they discussed, but it was a five-star gathering when former U.S. state secretary Henry Kissinger and former NATO commander Alexander Haig met in Monrerey, Calif., with West German Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. Schmidt, whose visit to the United States was not announced, and Kissinger arrived in Monterey on Sunday.

Miss Orient USA says pageant promoters are cheating her out of $1,500, a three-week vacation in the Far East, a screen test in the Philippines and a root beer promotion contract. Leilani Kyono O'Melia, 24, of Howell Township, near Atlantic City, N.J., says she will appear at the 1979 final of the relatively obscure pageant Friday night in Long Beach, Calif., to claim her prizes or close the pageant down. "I've been very patient for a year," the reigning Miss Orient said Monday. "I've acted like a lady. I've had a lot of class about it. But I want to make sure all these young ladies know they're going to be ripped off."

An escape artist who wants to be chained and dropped in water has sued NBC television, Live Wednesday host Dick Clark and escape artist Steve Baker for $100,000 — the prize he says they promised anyone who could do the Harry Houdini water torture cell escape on live television. Chris Chalen, 25, has performed escapes on television before and says he offered to perform the water feat shortly after the $100,000 challenge was issued on Clark's show. But Clark and NBC later withdrew the challenge, claiming the trick was too dangerous, Chalen said. Chalen's suit seeks the chance to perform the trick and earn the $100,000, "and obtain the notoriety and increased value to his own career," said his lawyer, Robert Weissman. In the escape, a man is tied in a straitjacket with handcuffs chaining his hands and feet. He is locked in a glass box and lowered into a 2,000-gallon tank of water. The trick is to get out alive. Baker performed the feat on Clark's show on Sept. 27, 1978, and Chalen said Clark announced that Baker would give $100,000 to anyone who could duplicate the escape.

And finally, Prince Charles, who is touring the Scottish highlands, was almost ensnared by a sheep's horns Monday. Visiting a farm near Oban, Argyll, the prince, who learned about sheepshearing during his school days in Australia, seized a 3-year-old ewe by the horns. The sheep bolted through the prince's legs. "I was worried about the horns," the prince said afterward. "They almost ruined the dynasty."

Somoza's holdings grabbed by junta

MANAGUA (AP) — Nicaragua's new government called Monday for the extradition of Anastasio Somoza and his family and close associates and confiscated the Somoza family's wealth in the country.

Somoza, after his resignation last Tuesday, fled to the estate he owns in Miami Beach, Fla. He now is sailing in the Caribbean.

The junta in one of three decrees issued Monday called for the extradition of Somoza, all members of his family and close associates who left Nicaragua after December, 1977. It was not known when the decree might be followed up by formal extradition requests to the United States and other governments.

A second decree ordered the confiscation of all the Somoza family holdings, estimated to be worth hundreds of millions of dollars, including about 30 per cent of the arable land in the country. Firms listed in the decree included Lanica, the national airline; Banco de Centroamerica, one of the region's majo banks plus 50 other companies ranging from a match factory to a ferry line.

It called on all employees of Somoza-owned businesses to help the new government take control of them.

A third decree banned the naming of any statues, bridges, parks or industrial plants after any member of the Somoza family. It also ordered that anything named for the Somozas be renamed in honor of those who fought to end the family dictatorship.

In a bid for diplomatic recognition, the five-member junta that took over the government Friday notified the U.S. embassy Monday that it now is in power and hopes to have friendly relations with the U.S. government.

U.S. Charge d'Affaires Thomas O'Donnell said the embassy will reply in a day or two after consultations with Washington. He indicated earlier that the reply will be positive.

The United States put Somoza's father in power and was the family's chief ally for more than 40 years but finally recognized the inevitability of the rebel victory and helped to convince Somoza he was finished.

The Red Cross estimated 40,000 to 50,000 Nicaraguans were killed since the Sandinista guerrillas' two-week uprising in September and said at least half of them died since the guerrillas' final offensive began May 28.

Bonn voyage for boat people

Times News Services

KUALA LUMPUR — A West German cargo ship arrived today with 110 Vietnamese refugees and another waited 100 kilometres off-shore with 261 more "boat people" who were rescued from the South China Sea.

All 371 will be resettled in West Germany, a West German embassy spokesman here said.

The two vessels were returning to Singapore after supplying provisions to a German oil rig off the Vietnamese coast when they picked up the refugees.

One ship picked up 110 Vietnamese refugees from their sinking boat near Kuala Trengganu on the northeast coast last Monday. They are now in Kuala Lumpur awaiting flights to Germany.

The other vessel carries 261 Vietnamese refugees rescued from their boats near Mersing on the southeast coast last Thursday. The refugees claimed they had been pushed out to sea by Malaysian authorities.

The approach of the two ships came a day after Malaysia said Western pledges to greatly increase resettlement of refugees have not altered its policy of driving away all the boat people who land on their shores.

Meanwhile, the United States is throwing the 7th Fleet into an international effort to save thousands of Vietnamese boat people adrift off the coastlines of Southeast Asia.

Long-range patrol planes "are flying daily missions in the South China Sea to locate and seek help for refugees in distress," Lt.-Cmdr. Gordon Peterson said in Washington Monday night.

And U.S. Navy ships "are being ordered to alter their routes, as feasible, into the areas where the refugees are likely to be located and to spend the maximum time in those areas while still meeting operational requirements," he said.

In a related development, the United States and Vietnam are trying to work out details of an agreement that might result in bringing some refugees directly to the United States.

BURNING SUPERTANKER Atlantic Empress seen under tow following last week's tanker collison and spill in the Caribbean. There are still 60 million gallons of crude oil aboard the burning ship and firefighters are still standing by more than 96 hours after the crash awaiting orders to board and fight the blaze. Crude oil is still spewing from the vessel.

One man's junk . . .

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Police are holding something that at least one man hopes will turn out to be a piece of Skylab.

The two kg. piece of slag-like metal fell from the sky Sunday, hitting the driveway of William J. Nash.

It will be returned to Nash after analysis, according to police spokesman Michael Bass. So Nash could be the owner of a piece of Skylab — or a piece of space junk.

A trial balloon, surely

Occasionally in the past, cabinet minister Bill Vander Zalm has shown himself to be a flier of trial balloons for the government, announcing so-called government policy before the government itself is sure what its policy is.

It now seems that Vander Zalm was playing this role again with his announcement on Monday about the ICBC car insurance rate structure for next year. Grace McCarthy, the minister in charge of ICBC — and the one responsible for the original confusion by refusing to explain the government's intentions — insisted Vander Zalm back off a bit from his original stand.

Good. The alternative — that the government really has adopted the plan Vander Zalm is talking about — is almost too horrendous to contemplate.

The private insurance companies have been saying for months that to eliminate all discrimination in rates based on age, sex and geography would be an exceedingly difficult procedure. Even they, however, have not suggested it would require a scheme as complicated and as blatantly unfair as that made public by Vander Zalm.

The major disparity in the Vander Zalm plan is the statement that all drivers would begin next year with a clean slate, regardless of their insurance record. This is somehow tied in with the existence of a special $20 million ICBC fund, the existence of which was hitherto unknown, to be used to ease the costs of bringing in the unisex system.

Vander Zalm says the differences in rates based on driving records over the past three years would be wiped out when the new system goes into effect. But, he adds, this does not mean the rates of safe drivers would rise markedly; instead, the universal rate would be set near the lowest end of the rate spectrum.

If the rates of safe drivers are not going to rise, that can mean only one thing: the rates of unsafe drivers, those who have proved to be poor risks, are going to decline sharply. If the money to pay for that decline comes from ICBC's special fund, then the corporation's spare cash — contributed by every driver in the province — will be used to subsidize bad drivers.

It's one thing for the government to use ICBC's accumulated surpluses to help eliminate discrimination against safe drivers who have previously been penalized only because of their age and sex. It's quite another for the government to use that money to lower the rates for unsafe drivers. Why on earth should all the safe drivers in B.C. have to pay to help ease the burden for unsafe drivers?

Moreover, the plan would appear to be quite unviable economically. Even in the face of studies to the contrary, the government has maintained it could implement "unisex insurance" without unduly penalizing safe, older or female drivers.

To use accumulated ICBC surpluses to fulfill that goal, however, is merely to delay the inevitable rate increases for those who have been blessed with low rates until now. Is Vander Zalm saying that once the mysterious surplus fund is used up, rates will go up for these large groups?

There's only one possible fate for Vander Zalm's trial balloon. It should be shot down as quickly as possible, and McCarthy should clarify the ICBC situation by explaining just how the government plans to implement unisex insurance.

'The scapegoat is us'

Victoria school trustees are reported to have spent a good part of their Monday night meeting looking for someone to blame for the relocation of the French immersion program from Cloverdale school, forced upon them by an ultimatum from the fire commissioner's office.

The search for a scapegoat was abandoned after an hour or so when the finger started to point at the school board itself. Its procrastination over the years finally forced the fire commissioner to order changes at the overcrowded school.

Six years ago, the board was notified that Cloverdale didn't meet fire safety requirements. The school was supposed to be closed in 1978, which satisfied the fire department, but that decision was reversed and now, five weeks before the school year starts, the fire commissioner has demanded that improvements be made.

The episode does not reveal anything new or shocking about the school board's methods; we are resigned to the trustees' turtle-like progress. But it does illustrate again just how badly bogged down are the board's planning and decision-making processes, especially as they affect the central issue facing the Victoria school district in the 1980s, declining enrolment. The trend has been clear for several years, and some schools have been closed. A 1977 study by the school board staff recommended a much wider reorganization of schools. The trustees have yet to deal seriously with its implications.

So decisions like Cloverdale are forced upon them. There may be more like it if the trustees can't make up their own minds.

". . . what I really want is to be as happy and glowing and loving and secure as the people in the Coca Cola and Big Mac and light beer commercials . . . and I was wondering if there's a pill which . . ."

Veteran speaks out

I have before me 40 or 50 newspaper cuttings that I have collected over the past nine months, all referring to the unhappy situation existing between B.C. hospitals and Health Minister Bob McClelland.

These clippings indicate in positive fashion that the hospitals generally are in a mess. To confirn this statement, we have the action of the board of Victoria General Hospital, who have asserted that "they will continue to give proper care to all patients regardless." To this published statement of their policy, the minister of health retorted, over the radio, "I hope they could find the money." It would appear that his whole attitude is one of laissez faire — in other words, he doesn't care.

Now to the Memorial Pavilion of the Jubilee Hospital. The old soldiers of World Wars I and II who are hospitalized are getting the blunt end of the hospital economy syndrome, so-called — for example, no professional overall supervision, young girls doing duties of orderlies, registered nurses being overworked, with the consequent reduction of basic care standards in all areas. We in the Memorial Pavilion had — note "had" — the most dedicated group of registered nurses, who were competent to fulfill all areas of care. Those few of us who are left, who survived the horrors of war in Europe and other areas of conflict, and who are not now in a position to protest — what treatment is meted out to us now! We are on the edge of obscurity, and are so classed.

McClelland is in hot water and knows it, but is obstinately pursuing his own course and disregarding public pressure. It has been pointed out many times that the patient to staff ratios in British Columbia are the lowest in Canada.

Mr. McClelland is spending part of his budget in expansion, to the detriment of patient care. He claims that there is a shortage of beds and nurses, whereas the converse is demonstrably evident, if you are on the inside, looking out. The printed news media is certainly doing its share to bring to the attention of the general public the present unsatisfactory conditions of hospital operation.

Finally, I speak on behalf of the veterans of the world wars. In the autumn of our lives, slowly but surely on our way to Valhalla, can we not expect to be treated with due respect and honor, after having started Canada on the way to nationhood at Vimy. Since the former Veterans' Hospital has been attached and finally absorbed by the Royal Jubilee Hospital, we have been deprived of the fruits that were promised to us in 1918 and 1945. It is no doubt a forlorn hope, and wishful thinking, but in my opinion the federal government is bound in honor to go to bat for us. — Arthur Dutton, Memorial Pavilion, Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Who's illegal?

I was shocked at the statement attributed to Ald. Geoff Vantreight in the Victoria Times of July 13. Mr. Vantreight is quoted as saying that Canada should not accept any more Vietnamese "boat people" because "they had left their country illegally," and "any support given here would be condoning an illegal act."

To start with, Mr. Vantreight is wrong on the facts. Most of the boat people have left Vietnam legally, indeed, with the active "encouragement" of their government. That is the problem; Vietnam is expelling its ethnic Chinese minority. Some, it is true, have fled the oppressive regime without observing the niceties of passport and visa control. What intrigues me is that Ald. Vantreight should choose to be identified with the Communist government which has made their lives intolerable, rather than with the refugees' flight to freedom.

I assume, of course, that Mr. Vantreight is a politican of consistent principle. I assume that he also opposed the entry into Canada of Chilean refugees who left their homeland "illegally" after the downfall of Allende. Can I also assume that he opposed the entry of people who fled across the Berlin Wall, or who left Hungary "illegally" during the 1957 rebellion. Indeed, I wonder whether Mr. Vantreight believes Canada should not have given refuge to Jews or others fleeing Hitler's Germany. Maybe we should not have allowed the Dutch Royal Family to enter Canada after they fled Holland in 1941. I'm sure they didn't stop to get an exit visa. — G.L. Kristianson, 4044 Catalina Terrace.

An honest citizen

On June 26, I attended a Lund's auction which I enjoyed. I was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Zachary, 2780 Somass Drive. Upon returning to his home, I discovered that I had forgotten my purse at the auction site. Mr. Zachary immediately phoned the Lunds' office and learned that someone had turned in my purse intact, anonymously. You can imagine how relieved I was, for my purse contained cash, passports, airline tickets and other important papers.

I wish to take this means to thank the party who found my purse and turned it in. We often hear of stealing, mugging and other crimes but good deeds are seldom recognized. I shall always remember my trip to Victoria, my wonderful host, but most of all the honest citizen who turned in my purse. It is good to know that there are wonderful people wherever you go. Once again Mahalo! — Sue Nakatsuka, P. O. Box 72, Koloa, Kauai, Hawaii.

Discrimination

I wish to register a strong protest against the government's recent change denying the homeowner grants to leasehold property.

This is nothing short of rank discrimination as it has formed two classes of taxpayers. — K. J. Wilde, 1106-647 Michigan Street.

What would economic association mean?

By PETER LESLIE

(This is the second of a four-part series examining the implications of sovereignty-association for Canada. Mr. Leslie is an associate of the Institute of Intergovernmental Relations and a teacher of political studies at Queen's University.)

When the Parti Quebecois held its convention in Quebec City early this month, the thorniest problem it had to handle was: What form of economic association?

Delegates voted to retain the Canadian dollar as a common currency, but appeared distinctly nervous about some of the implications of monetary union. They wanted a common market, but they also wanted to restrict its application in certain fields. And they insisted on avoiding any institutional link in which Quebec could be outvoted by Canada — or other partners in a broader association.

The PQ wants sovereignty. It wants economic security through association. It wants to be protectionist when it suits Quebec interests. In sum: it wants the benefits of economic union and none of the costs.

But isn't that what other provinces want too? Isn't Canada already in a situation where the idea of a national economy is being trod upon by province-building premiers?

How much difference?

To appreciate this comparison, we need to take a good look at the PQ resolutions on economic association, and at the form of economic union we have now through federalism.

Would acceptance of the PQ's idea of economic association lead to a significant extension of provincial protectionism?

The resolutions endorsed by the PQ convention propose a treaty between Canada and an independent Quebec for:

● The free movement of goods to be achieved through the parties' renunciation of the right to impose customs duties of any magnitude, or any form of indirect barriers to trade not explicitly permitted by specific agreement.

● As judged necessary, the establishment in common of protective tariffs in relation to third countries, account being taken of the short and the long term interests of each of the parties.

● The mutual recognition by the parties of the right to protect: their agricultural production, their programs of temporary assistance to economic development, and their systems of preferential purchasing by the state — these three fields being the subject of specific agreements.

What these resolutions amount to is a declaration of support for a customs union with three areas in which exceptions may be negotiated.

Of the three proposed exceptions to the rules of a customs union, only the protection of agriculture would require any expansion of the powers already exercised by Quebec and by all the other provinces. To control the import of farm products would be a big exception. It would scarcely be acceptable to those provinces that now rely heavily on sales in other provinces.

The PQ, though, is not the only Quebec party that would like to control the movement of farm products. Nor is Quebec the only province which wants to control agricultural production and marketing, and to impose import restrictions at the provincial borders. So, if there ever are negotiations on sovereignty-association, Quebec won't be without allies on this one.

The larger departures from the principle of a customs union in present-day Canada, however, result from restrictions on exports from the provinces of production, and not from barriers to imports. The provinces that have a big stake in being able to control exports are the resource-rich ones like Quebec — and like Alberta and Saskatchewan. Both of the prairie provinces have had legislation on the books to regulate extra-provincial sales of their resources. They want good prices, and they want to keep jobs within the province by insisting that their resouces be processed near the source. (In this they are just copying Ontario's policy of a century ago, which made home-province processing of logs a condition for the granting of timber leases).

It's not at all clear how far at present a province can go in regulating resource production, fixing prices, and channelling scarce supplies to favored customers (presumably, the in-province ones). When Saskatchewan tried to impose production controls on potash and to set up an export cartel to rig prices, the scheme was struck down by the Supreme Court. The court said Saskatchewan had invaded an exclusive federal field, the regulation of trade and commerce. So the province ended up nationalizing a large part of the industry in order to gain control over it — an expensive way of doing what it would like to have done by regulation.

Quebec would like to protect its agriculture industry.

Alberta, though, has been controlling the production and marketing of oil for 25 years or more. It's now 30 years since the province established a conservation board for natural gas with powers to control exports, requiring it to see that Alberta's needs would be met before those of other provinces. This power is of great importance when Alberta wants to establish a petrochemicals industry in opposition to the Petrosar project in Sarnia.

Increasingly, provincial governments are taking the attitude that only they are reliable guardians of their provinces' economic future. Those provinces that have a rich resource endowment intend to use it to stimulate their industrial development, to expand employment and to reduce their dependence on the metropolitan centre of the country in southern Ontario.

Quebec is one of those provinces. Its attempts to control the asbestos industry, by purchase if necessary, are directly comparable to Alberta's desire to control its energy supplies. Other parallels are found in Saskatchewan's wish to manage the potash industry, Newfoundland's aspirations for the fisheries, and B.C.'s insistence on keeping ownership of the forestry industry close to home where it can be watched.

All these aspirations are expressions of lack of confidence in the market economy which leads to specialization in the economic functions of the regions. With unregulated markets, some regions are likely to emphasize resource production and others to concentrate on manufacturing and the processing of raw materials. That's what a customs union and other forms of economic integration exist to foster. In Canada the trend is away from all this.

Under Pierre Trudeau the federal government bent before these winds of change, though it did try to impose firm limits on the extension of provincial economic powers. At last February's conference of first ministers, Trudeau proposed a constitutional amendment guaranteeing the provinces partial control over resources — exploration, development, export from the province, and pricing. Provincial action in these areas would generally override federal legislation in matters relating to inter-provincial trade.

There were two fundamental qualifications though. One was that no province could establish a lower price within its borders than outside. The other was that a federal law regulating trade and commerce would prevail if it was "necessary to serve a compelling national interest." Presumably this was intended to mean that Ottawa would retain the ultimate say in allocating scarce resources among potential buyers.

Through customs union

The PQ's project for sovereignty-association would rule out any such legislative powers for Ottawa, at least as applied to Quebec. But if there is to be a customs union, could the same purpose be accomplished by a treaty which limited the legislative powers of the Quebec National Assembly? Would the rest of Canada want to do this? Would it be tolerable to an independent Quebec?

Meanwhile, just two days before Clark took office, the PQ expressed its reservations about a full-fledged customs union. The idea of protecting Quebec agriculture will not go down well everywhere, but on this matter Quebec would find allies among the other provinces.

Its resolutions on economic association do not, however, address the biggest "live" issue pertaining to the free movement of goods. Regardless of the outcome of Quebec's referendum, and regardless of the eventuality of negotiations on sovereignty-association, the issue of provincial protectionism will have to be faced.

The birds of Macondo

By EDWIN McDOWELL

IQUITOS, Peru — Shortly after the bell in Santa Ana Cathedral tolls 6 o'clock, the darkening tropical sky begins filling up with birds. By tens of thousands they stream in from the surrounding jungle, soaring high over this Amazon city until they form a huge dark mass that blots out the dying rays of sunlight.

At 6:08, the yellowish lights flicker on in the Plaza de Armas, the attractive main square a block from the river, and the birds begin to glide slowly downward. Then moments later, as if responding to a silent command, they zoom toward the plaza in such frenzy that their whoosh drowns out the sound of passing motorcycles.

For the next two hours torrents of birds envelop the plaza, circling at blinding speed and creating a din like the sound of escaping steam. Finally, the exhausted birds come to rest in the plaza's fruit trees, rustling the leaves and boiling out of the branches whenever a child pelts them with stones.

At the first light of down, the birds race back toward the jungle, leaving the leaf-strewn plaza looking like a miniature battlefield, and leaving witnesses wondering whether they haven't stumbled upon Macondo, that imaginary pestilential jungle settlement created by Colombian novelist Gabriel Garcia Marquez.

"It's been like this for the last four years, every night from about April to October," said Edith Power de Olive, a native of Iquitos. "Peruvians call them golondrinas, which means swallows."

* * *

"They are probably southern martins, relatives of the purple martin," explained Dr. John P. O'Neill, director of the Louisiana State University Museum of Natural Science. "They have come north from Bolivia, Paraguay and Argentina to spend the winter, after which they return home to breed. They're the same family of birds that migrate to Capistrano."

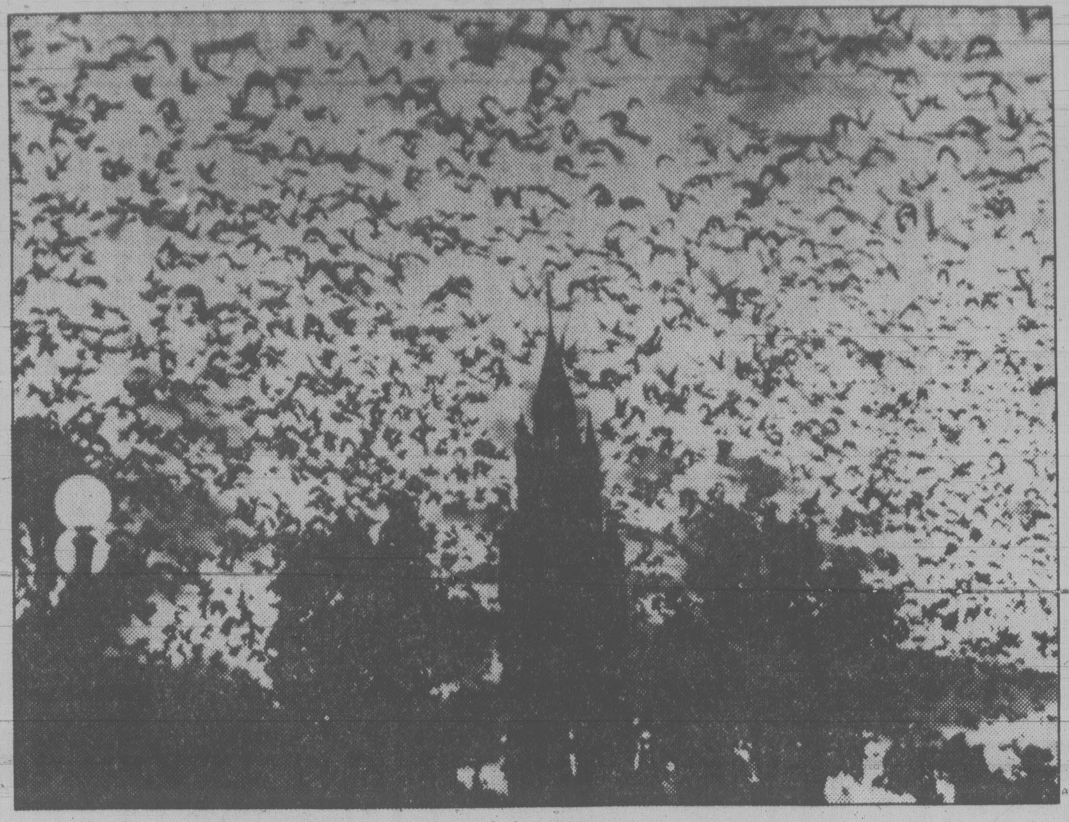
Dr. O'Neill saw the scene in Iquitos several years ago, during one of his frequent bird-watching expeditions to Peru. "But then there were only about 10,000 of them," he said. "What's unusual now is the size of the roost and the fact that they're congregating in a city."

Residents claim that some ornithologists put the number of birds as high as seven million, but there is no way of knowing exactly how many there are. Whatever the number, it is enormous and increasing each year.

"There didn't seem to be too many the first year," said Dr. Lorenzo Vargas, a Peruvian Navy surgeon, shortly after the birds settled down in the trees one recent night. "But each year there have been more than the year before."

Dr. O'Neill explained: "Once a nucleus of birds does pick a place, the roost often continues to grow each season."

But why the Plaza da Armas? Why not the nearby jungle, away from the stones hurled by children? Or why not, for example, the Plaza 28 de Julio, only about a mile toward the other end of town, where there are more trees, more light and fewer people?



Swallows fill the Plaza de Armas in Iquitos, Peru

"It's hard to tell what attracts roosting birds to a particular spot rather than another that looks to us just as good," said Dr. Eugene Eisenmann, research associate in the department of ornithology of the American Museum of Natural History. "Lots of things about native tropical birds are still not very well known. But once they pick a spot they tend to stay there until it is made impossible for them."

As for the birds' nightly routine, Dr. Eisenmann said, "I can assure you their behavior has nothing to do with the ringing of bells or any religious feeling. It's the season and the light. They go there to sleep and they probably think the plaza with all its disadvantages is safer than the jungle, where owls and a lot of small mammals go from tree to tree and catch them while they sleep."

Theories about migratory bird habits range from the effect of sun and stars to smell to hormone changes to a feeling for the earth's magnetic field. "Many people are working on the mysterious migration process," said Dr. O'Neill, "but it's so complex that no one can say exactly what it is."

He also said that while the golondrinas come in from the jungle each night, "they spend all day flying above the forest and feeding on the wing, eating small insects." Fortunately for them, Iquitos abounds in such culinary delights, since it is completely enveloped by jungle; not a single road leads in or out. The major distinction of this pleasant city of some 150,000 residents on the bank of the Amazon River, a former centre of the short-lived Amazon rubber boom, is that it is the world's farthest inland port, some 2,300 miles upriver from the Atlantic Ocean.

The nightly show still attracts appreciative local audiences to the plaza, where once rubber barons and their families promenaded in the latest fashions from Europe. After draping blankets or scarves over their heads and those of their children, Iquitos parents settle down on park benches to await the Feathered Follies. Many other spectators stand across the street, under the roof of a tin building that is said to have been designed by A. G. Eiffel for the Paris exposition of 1889 (as was his famous tower), then dismantled and sent here during the rubber era.

But not all residents consider the golondrinas a blessing. "Last year the mayor tried to discourage the birds from staying here, so just before they showed up for the season he ordered the branches cut off the trees," said David Olive, an American-born resident of Iquitos. The result was tragi-comedy.

"The birds came back on schedule, and at 6 p.m. they took off for the plaza by the thousands," he said. "They flew around and around like a runaway train, flying into cars, buildings, and going out of control. Thousands of them were killed. It was a scene right out of Alfred Hitchcock."

* * *

The next morning a group of citizens presented a petition to the mayor. "We said something had to be done for the birds," said Philippe Helsen, a native of Belgium who has lived here for 16 years. "We told him the birds were responding to an instinct and they needed those branches."

That afternoon about a hundred citizens and many Boy Scouts strung ropes across the trees, nailed on pieces of wood and worked through the blazing tropical sun to construct improvised roosts. "It looked like a Roman circus when we got through," said Olive. They finished in late afternoon and then waited. And waited some more.

"Finally about 7 o'clock we spotted some birds up on the Channel 7 TV antenna," Olive recalled. "Then eventually more birds came, and the antenna began to bend. Then it happened. Whole flocks of them started flying in over the river, past the cathedral at chest height. For a solid 10 minutes they kept coming, flying over the plaza and peeling off like the Blue Angels. Somebody strung out a banner reading, 'This way to the mayor's house.' Finally they landed on the ropes and wood, and eventually they adapted to it."

Today the branches are mostly grown back and the mayor has resigned. And each night when the cathedral bell strikes 6 o'clock, waves of golondrinas still stream in from the ungle, obedient to that inner summons that continues to baffle modern science.

An appetite for conflict

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — That was an excellent address President Carter gave a week ago: tight and well-organized, earnestly and honestly delivered, persuasively argued.

But you must have noticed what the media immediately did with it. The commentators viewed it largely as an event at this moment in political time: six months from the first presidential primary, 15 months from the presidential election. Such a narrow approach must almost certainly be cynical.

We were similarly cynical nearly a year ago when Mr. Trudeau, back from Bonn, brought a message of economic crisis. He instantly fashioned a Board of Economic Development, and so on. The gist of most commentaries was: "Is this change of attitude too late; can it begin the personal recovery of a prime minister preparing to go to the people?"

There may be less reason to be cynical about Jimmy Carter than about Pierre Trudeau. I think so, but I'm typically Canadian in being more sympathetic to our neighbors' leaders than to our own.

Who's kidding?

The point is that our respective ways of shaping and distributing the news and commentary has an enormous twist toward topicality and contention. This week. Next month. Who's against whom? What clashes of interests and ambitions are involved? Who's up and who's down? And in this case as in so many others, who's this man convincing and who's he kidding?

The bane of executive leadership in the U.S. is Congress. The president can rarely control it, not in the sense that our prime minister can usually control the House or dictate and control its law-making.

In Canada the recalcitrants fighting federal leadership on the grand, national issues are the provinces and their premiers. They are just as difficult as the Senate and the House are for the American executive branch when it comes to developing a common cause to the challenges the nation faces.

We might well remember that we have had a meshing of purpose in common cause only twice, and briefly, in Canada's past decade.

The first united front collapsed in Victoria in June, 1971. It was a greater disaster, we can see with hindsight, than we knew at the time. When Robert Bourassa backed away from the constitutional charter after the seventh meeting of the constitutional conference, we lost the best chance in modern times to undo our fundamental dilemma.

The second grand binding of purpose was the anti-inflation program of October, 1975. For a few brief months our governments were as one. Then, slowly, the consensus evaporated, as did the solutions to the inflation problem.

So, majestic and fresh starts on matters of overwhelming concern are equally difficult in Canada and the United States.

Lost confidence

What distinguished Mr. Carter's assay last week, and what I can't see our present prime minister doing (any more than the last one) is going right to the core of the situation. This, in Mr. Carter's case, is the erosion of American confidence in its society and goverment.

The president moved from the delineation of the national problems to the noble need ". . . to change our course, we simply must have faith in each other, faith in our ability to govern ourselves, and faith in our future."

And Carter went from this to his program of intentions for the energy crisis which involves America and the whole western world.

After he was finished, at once and interminably since, what he had to say and when and why he said it was reduced largely to opinions about how he will survive in the presidency and how his appeal harked back to his campaign of "running against Washington." Above all, those determined for various reasons to downgrade or rebut Carter's analysis and prescriptions have had a good time and lots of prominence. They've ignored the heart of the speech.

Carter's was truly an address worth pondering, and not only by Americans. But it's doubtful that such a great deal of thinking or response will take place given the appetite of the media's interpreters for immediacy and contention.

Think small, save energy

By ELISABET VAN NOSTRAND
Newsday

Encouraged by leaders who ought to know better, Americans want to believe there's a big technological fix, a major new breakthrough, for just about any problem. More than anything else, that promise has stood in the way of mobilizing the public to deal realistically with the energy crisis. They've been told over and over — and they apparently believe — that good ol' American know-how and spirit will come to the rescue once again.

That counter-productive premise was reiterated by none other than Vice President Walter Mondale, subbing for his boss at the National Governors Association meeting in Louisville two weeks ago. Said Mondale, to thunderous applause:

"The country that developed synthetic rubber overnight, the country that put a man on the moon, must now create an Apollo project to produce alternative fuels. We must do that, and we must start today."

That sounds good to gasline-weary voters; it's only their tax money, not their own activities, that would be affected. Selling Joe Blow on going to the moon — a fun and macho American thing to do — was a lot easier than convincing him to get a second mortgage on his house to pay for insulation, or to walk instead of drive to the post office.

But the most promising solution to the energy crisis lies not in a program of moon-shot dimensions, but in a lot of little inventions and improvements to make the energy we already produce stretch further.

Getting more power out of each unit of energy is precisely the course advocated by the Harvard Business School, which has just released the results of a six-year study. Prof. Robert Stobaugh, director of the study, notes that by subsidizing such improvements as greater mileage for cars and better building insulation, "You can save 5 million barrels (of oil) a day by the late 1980s — faster than you can get even 1 million barrels a day from synthetic fuels."

The United States needs to develop synthetic fuels, to be sure, but no matter how much tax money that's thrown into such a program, it will be years before it has any great impact on oil imports. And synthetics won't come cheap, even by today's energy-pricing standards. Energy efficiency does, and that's what conservation is all about.

Conservation doesn't mean we have to "freeze in the dark," as some skeptics contend. Projections based on historical growth say the United States would have to double its energy production by the year 2000 to maintain economic growth, but a report this year by the President's Council on Environmental Quality concludes the United States can enjoy a healthy, expanding economy by the turn of the century while using only 10 to 15 per cent more energy than today.

The technology required is not on a moon-shot scale; much of it is already known. There's a need for a national purpose all right, but it must be reflected in the daily activities of millions of Americans. And it must be reflected in day-to-day government and business planning.

Unfortunately, conservation is not a sexy subject. Politicians who espouse it, including President Carter, who made conservation a cornerstone in his first energy plan, soon abandoned it in favor of more dramatic, action-oriented and politcally appealing policies.

But active conservation — inventing new light bulbs as opposed to turning the light off when leaving a room — requires money and talent and innovation. And it goes hand-in-hand with development of renewable energy, which is and always has been the sun.

Not time to debate death penalty

THE SUN
An Editorial

As if the country didn't have enough headaches, Esquimalt-Saanich Progressive Conservative MP Don Munro wants to give us another. Mr. Munro wants to lead a drive to bring the question of capital punishment before parliament once again with the objective of getting it restored.

Quite aside from the merits, or lack of them, of restoring the death penalty, a more ill-advised and inopportune action by a member of parliament, particularly one in Mr. Munro's position, is difficult to imagine.

MUNRO

Consider the situation: Mr. Munro's party has just formed a national government for the first time in 17 years. It is a minority government. It has a thick sheaf of contentious and difficult matters to contend with, some of them involving new problems, some of them involving old problems left unsolved by the previous government — unemployment, inflation, national unity, constitutional reform, regional disparity, national defence, the energy squeeze, and Arab reaction to the Israeli embassy affair, to name some of them.

Into this plateful of urgent considerations Mr. Munro would regurgitate one of the most divisive and traumatic issues to have troubled Canadians this century.

It is just three years since parliament, after decades of agonized soul-searching, decided in a free vote — and, yes, by a narrow margin — to abolish capital punishment. Many people were unhappy with the decision, but it was made in the best traditions of parliamentary democracy.

In the election campaign just passed there were attempts — notably by the Canadian Police Association, which mounted an expensive advertising campaign, and by some individual candidates, including all those running under the Conservative banner in B.C. — to make capital punishment an election issue. But it did not become one, principally because the three major parties recognized — at the leadership level at least — that among all the other problems they had to grapple with, it simply was not a priority.

The capital punishment question still bothers a lot of Canadians, and it may well be that another vote will have to be held before we can get it out of our systems. But this is not the time for it. It should be put aside until more pressing matters have been attended to. This is a time to emphasize what unites us, not what divides us.

If Mr. Munro wishes to do a service to his countrymen, that is what he should do.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a moderate rally today, overcoming continuing concerns over the outlook for the U.S. dollar and interest rates.

Gainers held a 9-to-5 lead over losers in the mid-afternoon tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Gold prices rose to above $306 an ounce in London today and the U.S. dollar remained on the defensive in foreign-exchange markets.

Analysts noted some disappointment over that trend, which came despite an increase in the Federal Reserve Board's discount rate late last week to a record 10 per cent.

Along with that increase in the charge the Reserve sets on loans to its member commercial banks, open-market money rates have been rising againof late.

National Airlines led the active list, up ⅛ to $49⅝ in trading that included blocks of 500,000 and 100,000 shares at $49⅝. On Monday Pan American World Airways, one of several companies that wants to take over National, said it bought more than 900,000 National shares.

Xerox picked up ⅝ to $60⅞. The company posted second quarter profits of $1.90 a share, up from $1.59 in the comparable period last year.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index added .27 to 58.04.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was little changed near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index rose 0.3 to 467.0.

Industrials were lower, oils mixed and golds unchanged.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. MDT today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 825 head, consisting of a light supply of all classes with trade dull from a narrow local demand.

A1-2 slaughter steers traded $2 lower while A1-2 slaughter heifers traded from 50 cents to $1 lower. Slaughter cows opened $1 lower and by mid-morning had dropped a full $4. Slaughter bulls were trading barely steady with the largest percentage selling at the lower end of quotations.

A1-2 slaughter steers over 1,000 pounds 72-74.10. A1-2 slaughter heifers over 850 pounds 68-71. D1-2 cows 49-51, D3-5 46-49. Good bulls 68-70.

Feeder cattle receipts were composed of mostly shortkeep feeder steers, which sold $2 lower. One package of 500-600-pound feeders traded at 87.25.

Women on the board: Are they just tokens?

TORONTO (CP) — Women hold fewer than one per cent of Canada's 13,000 public and private company directorships, a Conference Board in Canada study shows.

By comparison, 28 per cent of corporate boards in the United States have women members, a 17-per-cent increase in the last five years.

Susan Cooke, director of the 300-member Association of Women Executives of Toronto, said the women on the Canadian boards are either tokens or have vested interests.

Five women directors interviewed recently conceded that being female was one of the reasons they were elected. But all five said they were not tokens.

Reva Gerstein, 61, a psychologist and educator, said: "Unless women run their own businesses, they have not made much progress through the corporate ranks.

"So you find the women (directors) have academic, government or professional backgrounds, usually with credibility in administration or finance."

Some of the women interviewed said they have gained stature in the eyes of business because of prominent family backgrounds or marriages.

Gerstein, a director of four corporations, was married for 30 years to Bertrand Gerstein, chairman of Peoples Jewellers Ltd. of Toronto and a bank and hospital director. She now is divorced.

"It certainly didn't do me any harm," Gerstein said. "But I've been known enough on my own that people thought I was my husband's sister.

"I've run voluntary organizations all my life. I guess I've always had leadership ability. Even when I was seven years old I was president of my club."

Economist Gail Cook, who became the director of two companies within the last 1½ years, was married nearly a year ago to Roy Bennett, president of Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. in Oakville, Ont. Her father, William Cook, is past executive-director of the National Research Council.

But she said her appointments are a natural extension of her former position as executive vice-president at the C. D. Howe Research Institute of Montreal.

"My time there was spent as a go-between between academics and business," she said.

Mona Campbell, 60, inherited Dover Industries Ltd. of Toronto from her father, Frederick Morrow, when he died in 1953. She is also a director of the Toronto Dominion Bank.

"Certainly I think a lot of the environment you have grown up in rubs off," Campbell said.

"I don't say that people like myself are exceptions at all, just that maybe our minds are bent that way and it's of interest. I think you are accepted as what you are, not who you are.

"My father was a director at the same bank for something like 27 years." Campbell said.

Mary Alice Stuart, 50, chairman of CJRT-FM Inc. of Toronto, a non-profit radio station, said: "I would like to think most of the contacts I have built over the past few years have been through a faith in me, not because my name was Burton."

Stuart is the eldest child of the late Edgar G. Burton, chairman of Simpsons Ltd. of Toronto. Her husband, Alexander Stuart, is president of Electrolyser Corp.

Black cool to to PQ ideal

MONTREAL (CP) — Conrad Black, president of Argus Corp., says the federal government would lose its credibility and some provinces would become banana republics if Quebec were to achieve independence.

Black, in an interview published Monday in Le Devoir,, says Quebecers — particularly nationalist Quebecers — have on every occasion proclaimed that Canada is only a branch office of the United States, not only on the economic level but culturally also.

"So, if Quebec achieved its independence, in my mind there would be no possibility that English Canada would be interested in anything other than eventually associating with the United States."

Black says that, without having a mandate to speak for English-Canadians, he believes intuitively that they prefer to remake Canada "with Quebec in a more important role than in the past."

If Quebec becomes independent, English-Canadians would lose interest "without hostility; but it would be the end of federalism as such, the end of the Canadian idea."

As for Bill 101, which established the French Language Charter, Black says there has been a tradition of anti-liberal laws in Quebec since the time of Taschereau. "Quebec wants to make itself 100-per-cent French," he adds. "That's understandable. But for those who are not of the same cultural group, it's not very interesting."

Hydro gets a mediator

A mediator has been appointed in contract negotiations between B.C. Hydro and the Office and Technical Employees Union.

The 3,700 members — 125 in Victoria — of the OTEU served strike notice Friday.

They said no job action is planned but they want to pressure Hydro to get back to the bargaining table.

The union is asking 9.2 per cent plus a two per cent adjustment because they were the only Hydro union under Anti-Inflation Board guidelines for a full three years.

Hydro has offered a package with increases averaging 6.5% but no retroactive pay.

Vander Zalm softens stand

rate assessed all drivers will be low and neither the safe driving discount nor bad driving records will count next year.

McCarthy apparently was livid. She met with Vander Zalm in her office where raised voices could be heard out in the hall.

Another source said Vander Zalm met with Bennett for more than an hour Monday afternoon.

But today Vander Zalm says he has not met with Bennett for two or three days and that his meeting with McCarthy concerned other matters and his ICBC comments were not mentioned.

Bennett is not available for comment and McCarthy refuses to discuss the issue.

McCarthy said she has no comments on Vander Zalm's statements.

"I introduced the legislation and gave the government's position at the press conference," she said.

"But as to rampant speculation by private insurance agents, the media or, yes, from cabinet ministers, I will not comment."

ICBC officials in Vancouver have not denied Vander Zalm's claims.

They say, as before, details of the program will be unveiled in September.

Secrecy bill

until October. He said Parliament could have been recalled as early as June 11.

"I find it impossible to understand why a new government, after more than 16 years in Opposition, with all the answers, would delay its presentation of policies for more than four months," MacEachen said in a prepared statement.

He added that when the Liberals regained power in 1963, former prime minister Lester Pearson met Parliament in less than four weeks.

The last Parliament ended March 26 when former prime minister Pierre Trudeau called the election.

Baker defended the delay in meeting Parliament on grounds the new government has made "productive use" of the time to review and try to rectify actions of the Liberal government during the last 16 years.

The Conservative government will fulfill a long-time commitment to more open government, Baker said, by introducing a freedom of information bill as soon as Parliament convenes.

The bill, designated a special issue by Clark, would give citizens access to all government information with certain narrowly-defined exceptions.

Ministers' decisions not to release information could be appealed to the courts, Baker said.

Parallel to this bill would be reform of Parliamentary procedure to give Commons committees more power to examine government spending, and to improve the balance between the executive and legislative branches of government, Baker said.

He said Finance Minister John Crosbie intends to bring down his first budget a few weeks after the opening of the new session, but referred reporters' questions on specific economic legislation to Crosbie.

The government is committed to introducing a plan to allow homeowners to deduct mortgage interest and property taxes from taxable income.

Bennett disagrees with hike

Premier Bill Bennett said Monday he disagrees with the decision by the federal government to raise the Bank of Canada interest rate.

"I have always been concerned with the high cost of money and I don't agree with undue interest charges on British Columbians," he said in an interview.

"I think it is difficult and, yes, the United States rate puts pressure on Canada but I think we have gone for too much of a difference here, and I certainly am not in agreement with a rise of that nature right now."

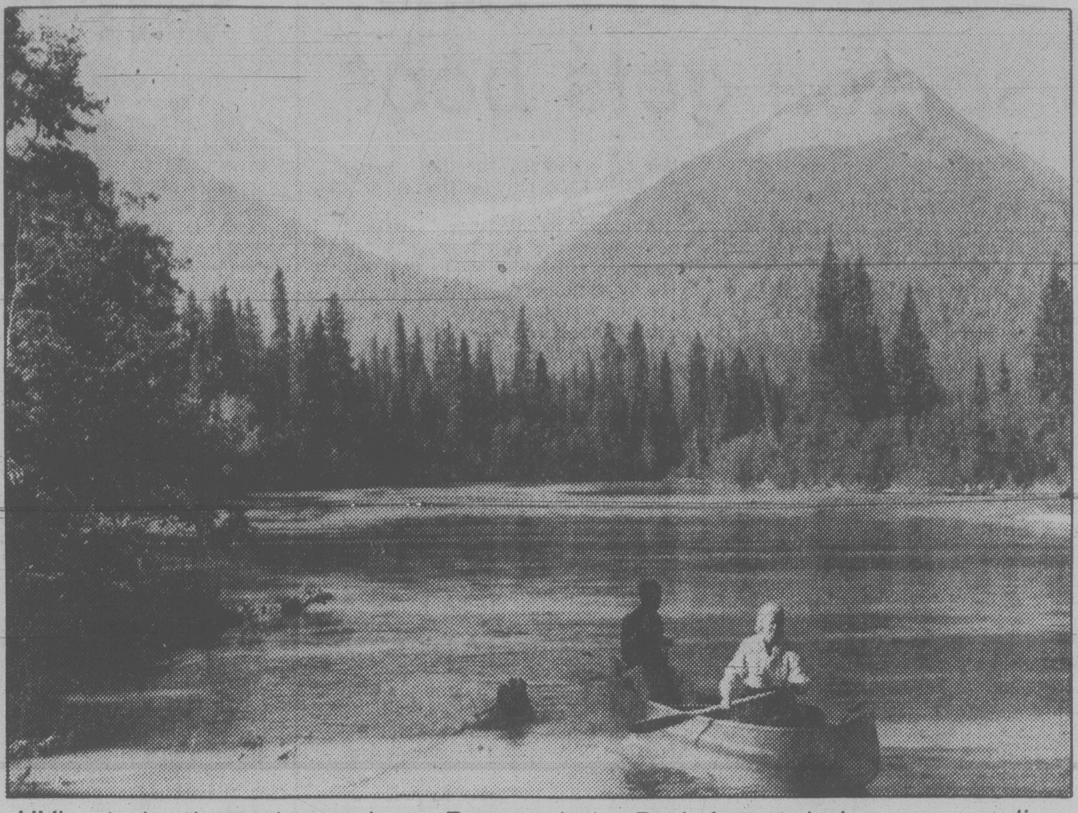
Computer to control wilderness canoes?



UVic student's work may keep Bowron Lake Park from ruin by overcrowding

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Canoe traffic in one of B.C.'s most popular wilderness parks may soon be regulated by a computer program being set up at the University of Victoria.

Hunched over a desk littered with charts, maps and calculations, Love is setting up a computer program that one day may save Bowron Lake Provincial Park from ruin.

Some wilderness areas are threatened by logging or mining, but Bowron's main problem is simply people — too many of them.

With Love's Wilderness Use Simulation Model (WUSM) park managers hope to maintain the area's quality while at the same time allowing the maximum number of people to use it.

This summer 400 canoeists paddling the loop of lakes, linked by rivers and portages, are carrying with them trip diaries, recording data vital to Love's project.

When his computer model is complete provincial parks managers will be able to plug into the model and determine what effects various management techniques will have on the area.

The WUSM won't tell managers what to do to reduce congestion in the park, stresses Love, but it will tell them what will happen when they try any specific approach.

With the WUSM, planners will be able to test their theories on the computer model, rather than bringing in new regulations on a trial-and-error basis.

The only traffic control in effect at Bowron now is a limit on the size of individual parties. No more than six people are allowed to canoe in a group.

Love, who is funded by the parks branch and the department of labor's Provincial Youth Employment program, says he's the first one in Canada to make use of the WUSM — a method pioneered in the U.S. He hopes to set up a consulting business when he graduates and work on unravelling the traffic jams in parks across the country.

Love said he picked Bowron Lake as his first target because it's one of the most popular canoe areas in the province and is under increasing pressure.

"About 3,500 people used the lakes last summer," said Love. "About 1,100 will use the park in August . . . there can be as many as 60 people (in 10 separate parties) starting out from the trailhead at the same time."

One of the problems, says Love, is that the bulk of the canoeists come from Victoria and Vancouver. To get to the park they generally head off from their homes after work on a Friday, arrive sometime on the weekend, and start their canoe expeditions on Monday morning.

That means people hoping to escape to the wilderness for a week or so could find themselves right in the middle of a flotilla of strangers, all headed in the same direction, with the same destinations and general travel schedule.

So much for the wilderness experience.

Love says research has shown that for most people the wilderness atmosphere is destroyed if they have three or more encounters with other parties in a day.

For the group of 60 that found themselves suddenly together at the Bowron Lake trailhead, there would be no such thing as solitude. Three portage trips are needed to get started on the first lake — that means a total of 180 encounters for each person before the trip has really begun.

Compounding the problem are the natural bottlenecks along the route, where canoeists who have been alone on a large lake are channeled together at camping spots, river mouths or portage points. Again the wilderness atmosphere is ruined by traffic jams in the middle of nowhere.

To make matters worse, says Love, use of the park can only increase in future.

"Despite short-run fluctuation in visitor use within the park, the demand for wilderness will likely continue to increase in the long run. At some point in the future, the fixed supply will be outstripped by demand and direct use controls may be necessay," he says.

Love says you need only look south of the border to see what overcrowding can do to a wilderness area.

Many parks in Canada are already suffering from congestion problems and Love says the federal government has expressed interest in hiring him next year.

TOWN TALK

Environment Minister Rafe Mair is gung ho to take Regional District chairman Murray Glazier up on his suggestion that he go to the Caribbean for a first-hand look at the oil spill off Trinidad-Tobago.

But he says he would have trouble convincing his cabinet colleagues the usefullness of the junket in the midst of the legislative session — especially when the Socreds cling to only a slim majority in the house.

Glazier thinks the trip would give Mair a much better feeling for the environmental impact of an oil spill and then be more firm in his opposition to the proposed oil port across the strait at Port Angeles.

Mair said the situation is entirely different — an oil spill in the open sea moving out to sea, as opposed to a spill in Juan de Fuca Strait that would be in close quarters.

But if Glazier can convince the NDP to send along an MLA to balance Mair's absence and if the Victoria alderman can convince cabinet to send him, "I'd be delighted to get away from the legislature for a while, especially to Trinidad-Tobago."

That seven-mile traffic jam on Sooke Road Saturday was a headache to many but profitable to officials of All Sooke Day.

After the bills are paid, the loggers' day is expected to net some $12,000 for the Sooke community.

Timing is everything, they say, and Dick and Margie Wilbourn of Pullman, Wash., picked an excellent time to visit Victoria.

When they stepped off the MV Coho on Saturday they were selected tourists of the month by Victoria Jaycees. They won two free nights at a local hotel, plus dinner for two and tickets to local attractions.

They also received a plaque from Ald. Murray Glazier.

When the Naden band of CFB Esquimalt turned out Monday to play for patients at the Memorial Pavilion there was at least one more appreciative listener other than the veterans and hospital staff.

She was Mrs. Winifred Harding, who called Town Talk to say she had asked a member of the band to try to get a concert arranged for the veterans and intended to be there to hear them perform.

At 85, Mrs. Harding visits the chapel at the Memorial Pavilion every Sunday morning.

Anyone interested in a feast and watching sheep dogs do their stuff can indulge themselves Saturday in Ganges.

The Salt Spring Island Farmers' Institute is hosting sheep dog trials at the institute's property on Rainbow Road (which runs past the elementary school), starting at 1:30 p.m. The activity should be easy to spot from the road.

After the trials, Salt Spring lamb (for which the island is famous) will be featured at a barbecue and beer garden that organizers say should start at 3:30 p.m.

That could be what islanders indulgently refer to as "island time", which tends to run a half-hour or so behind the prevailing time elsewhere in the province, so dog fancier-lamb lovers should be prepared to dine at the prevailing island pace and time — leisurely and a little later.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will feature Victoria women in their middle years Sunday at 4 p.m. in its program Access.

For 30 minutes the women, all members of Prime Time, will discuss the various problems faced by women in their age group.

Initiated in 1977, Prime Time is a federally-funded project until 1980 that deals with the special problems — such as divorce, widowhood, menopause, unemployment, lack of skills or education — faced by women aged from 35 to 60.

McKinnon enters talks

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon will meet Capital Regional District directors on Saturday to discuss the regional district's bid to build a septic tank dumping station at Macaulay Point.

Meeting with the minister will be regional board chairman Murray Glazier and directors Dave Hill, Howard Sturrock and Charles Perkins.

Meanwhile, Glazier has denied a suggestion by Esquimalt alderman Colin Blair that the dumping of oil at the Millstream Road septage lagoon could be used as a lever to move the facility to defence property at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt.

Glazier said it is a problem of security.

He said there are various compelling reasons why the dump must be moved. One, he said, is the leakage that could occur into the stream just down the hill.

Glazier said there are a number of private wells in the area and continued use of the site might pollute them.

Leasehold tax break unlikely

Long-term leasehold property dwellers who don't receive the provincial homeowner's grant aren't likely to get any relief.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday basic Social Credit party philosophy doesn't agree with leasing ownership.

The government earlier offered the homeowner's grant (now worth $380) to a number of 99-year-lease properties that qualified under a federal housing program.

But leaseholders who failed to register their 99-year leases before Dec. 31, 1977, or who took over a lease property after that date no longer qualify for the grant.

"The whole object of the homeowner's grant is to encourage home ownership," Vander Zalm said.

"I for one don't want to encourage people leasing. If they can lease they can buy."

The minister said when the province agreed to make the grant available for certain long-term leases, it was not a commitment to accept leases per se and therefore not intended to be an on-going program.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber, who has about one-third of the province's 99-year leasehold units in his riding, says the denial of the grant flies in the face of the Social Credit philosophy.

Such leases are, for all intents and purposes, individually-owned homes, he said.

He thinks it creates two classes of homeowner living side by side in the same building — the one who qualifies for the grant because he applied for it in time and the one who is denied the grant.

Two large complexes — Orchard House on Michigan and Villa Royale on Heywood — contain about 300 leasehold units between them.

Vander Zalm said there are arguments to be made both ways.

"I have some sympathy with them but I'm not prepared to accept leasing as ownership.

"We carefully looked into the pros and cons before deciding."

Genstar loses again

Genstar Development Co.'s hopes for a housing development on property it owns in the Tod Inlet area have once again been dashed.

Central Saanich council's subdivision and zoning committee voted Monday night to reject the company's latest plan to build 130 homes on 50 acres it owns west of Wallace Drive.

The matter has now been referred to the next council meeting in two weeks time, but it is doubtful the outcome will change.

He said he is uncertain of the the company's next move.

The company had offered to give the municipality 19 acres of prime waterfront and 20 acres along Tod Inlet if it could get approval for the development.

But the committee members, after a discussion lasting only about 15 minutes, decided to leave the property in its present recreational-commercial designation.

Such a designation would allow for a hotel, motel or golf course but not housing.

In addition the committee proposed changing the zoning on 152 acres of Genstar holdings east of Wallace from estate residential on minimum two to 10 acre lots to recreation-commercial.

Large turnout hears plight of refugees

A meeting held at St. John's Anglican Church Monday night to discuss the problem of the boat people was attended by about 150, considerably more than expected.

The meeting, sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association of Victoria, heard immigration officer Gerry Elliot explain the sponsoring program, provincial labor ministry employee Wayne Mullin discuss proposed legislation to create a permanent refugee assistance program, and Pearson College teacher Dr. Wu Chong Tan deal with the cultural needs of the refugees.

Members of the Inter-Cultural Association also outlined the part they will play in setting up an information clearing house, co-ordinating sponsor groups and providing follow-up services for refugees settling here.

The highlight, however, was a brief talk by refugee Ngen Quang, who described his flight from his homeland and the hardships he and his family suffered.

Quang is one of 34 refugees to arrive in the Greater Victoria area in the past three months. All have been sponsored by the federal government with the Sacred Heart Catholic Church parish helping them adjust.

Anyone wishing more information should contact the Inter-Cultural Association, Room 415, 620 View, telephone 388-4728.

Trustees boil over but approve move

It's been on a back burner for about six years but when the old Cloverdale School issue boiled over Monday night, Greater Victoria school board trustees expressed surprise and anger.

Charges of bad planning and panic behavior were hurled but not at anyone in particular. After the smoke cleared, the board approved a motion to move Cloverdale's French immersion program to Quadra Elementary School.

The board had little choice because provincial Fire Commissioner Reg Perkins had ordered the board to either close the 1921 building on the school site or make the alterations necessary to bring it up to fire safety standards.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables told the board it would cost $900,000 to make the necessary renovations to the eight-classroom building. He also said the ministry probably wouldn't approve such renovations, as it would cost only $1.1 million to build a new structure.

YOUNG

The decision to shut the school means that about 175 students in the French program will have to transferred to Quadra, and there are only five weeks in which to accomplish the move. Trustees expressed the fear that many parents will simply register their children in the English program, thus straining the other already-crowded newer building at Cloverdale.

Portable classrooms will be used at Cloverdale and Quadra schools to house the overflows.

In an effort to minimize the problems of relocation, Stables assured the board the school district's administration will launch an information blitz. Parents of children affected by the move will get two letters and one phone call and be invited to two meetings.

Stables said the Cloverdale French program had been well received and the administration wants to keep it active.

"The administration is going to go all out to make the parents and pupils feel comfortable with this move."

Trustee John Young suggested that fire commissioners were thought of as "sacred people" by society, but he wondered if they should be allowed to dictate to the board.

"They've inspected this school twice a year for many years," said Young.

He suggested the fire commissioner should have given the board "fair warning of one, two or three years that the school would be shut down unless improvements were made."

"As a result of this bombshell, this board should express its displeasure with the short notice given by the fire marshal."

Trustee Peter Yorke pointed to the thick sheaf of documents outlining the history of the Cloverdale School problem, which dates back to 1973.

"There was plenty of time; there was a logical progression."

A few Cloverdale parents attended the meeting, but because they were allowed to ask questions only at the beginning of the meeting, they were unable to get into the later board discussion of the issue. Most left after the motion was passed.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me if there is a Noise Abatement Society in Victoria? G.T.S.

A. Smoke and Noise Abatement Society, W.J. Smith, 937 Balmoral, Victoria, V8T 1A7.

Q. How did the sport of karate begin? B.W.

A. It is based on a technique from the sixth century Chinese art of Chuan-fa (Kempo) and was developed by an unarmed populace in Okinawa as a weapon against armed Japanese oppressors.

Q. I've been told some male moths can smell a female as much as a mile away. Is it true? B.G.

A. Yes. In fact the male Emperorer moth can detect the sex attractant of a virgin female 6.8 miles upwind according to German experiments carried out in 1961.

Save-water plea made

Ald. Jim Cumming said today a letter will be sent to ratepayers asking for their co-operation in limiting water use, particularly during the late afternoons when the demand is highest.

The letter is expected to be in the mail by the end of the week.

If wasteful practices can be eliminated, water restrictions will not be necessary this year, he said.

Cumming said there is sufficient water available to the system but the problem is distribution.

Homeowners in the southern half the municipality will be amply served when a new 24-inch main line is completed next week, but those in the northern half will continue to encounter problems because the main line there is only eight inches in diameter, insufficient to handle the peak demand periods.

Cumming said homes on higher elevations have been hardest hit by falling pressure.

However, he said, those homeowners should find some relief when the system is connected to a 300,000-gallon booster tank at Pat Bay airport.

Cumming said the use of the tank is a temporary measure.

Eventually the municipality's entire distribution system must be upgraded.

To that end council has approved spending $5,000 for a Capital Region Board study and report.

Police said three apartments were entered after the doors were jimmied open with what appeared to be a screwdriver. In addition there were attempted break-ins into three other apartments.

A small amount of money was taken.

PINK-JACKET SHOCKER

Daddy pays bills, so son gets boot

LONDON (CP) — The pink-jackets-and-boots brigade in this bastion of fair play for all is shocked at the spectacle of a show-jumping star ousting his own son from the national team.

The uproar came about when Robert Smith, 18, son of internationally known Harvey Smith, was picked for the British team to the Dublin International next month.

Daddy made it only as first reserve, so he put pressure on selectors to dump his son and give him a spot on the squad.

The bluff Yorkshireman, famous for flashing peace signs at judges, told the selectors he owns the horses Robert rides, and if he doesn't make the team, neither do the horses.

"I bought the mare, I pay the bills and I call the tune," Smith the elder said.

"Anybody who lives under my roof lives by my law — Smith's law."

Robert was picked after becoming the youngest-ever winner of the King George V Cup at Wembley last week.

"But I won six classes at the Royal International last week, so my form speaks for itself," Harvey said.

"I just couldn't believe my ears after the selectors' meeting when I heard that I was only the first reserve at Dublin."

Raymond Brooks-Ward, official spokesman for the British Show Jumping Association, said: "It would have been Robert's first senior appearance for his country and now he can't go."

Father Smith argues that even if his son, an amateur, rode the horses in Dublin, he would have to do so without reference to the Japanese electronics firm which sponsors them when they are ridden by the elder Smith, a professional.

When he heard the news, Robert said:

"It's all down to my father.

"He wanted me out and himself in. I'm very upset and fed up. I qualified and should have been on the team."

The Sun, one newspaper which devoted a full page to the controversy, said editorially:

"Harvey has probably earned himself a two-finger salute. . . ."

Vic remembers those big plays

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Football League season is barely two games old, but head coach Vic Rapp views tonight's contest between his undefeated British Columbia Lions and the winless Winnipeg Blue Bombers as a key in determining his club's destiny.

"We've never had a 3-0 start since I've been here," said Rapp. "A win and we've made a good beginning. A loss and we're right back in the middle of the pack."

The Bombers have made the Lions look more like submissive Christians the last two seasons, winning two of three in regular-season play both years. With that in mind, Rapp is looking past Winnipeg's 0-2 start to their history of doing well against the British Columbia club.

"They always seem to hurt us with big plays," he said. "They've got good speed, so they can score in a hurry."

The Bombers, however, will be without one of the men who is known for making those big plays — second-year wide receiver Joe Poplawski.

Last year's CFL rookie of the year suffered a broken ankle in Winnipeg's 35-7 loss to the Stampeders in Calgary last Wednesday and will be out until late September.

His spot will be taken by recently-acquired Bob O'Doherty and rookie Walter Passaglia, brother of Lions' kicker Lui Passaglia.

The Bombers could also be vulnerable at quarterback where Dieter Brock will be testing a sore knee, also injured in the Calgary game.

"He is mobile," said team spokesman Scott Taylor. "It's all going to depend on whether he can take a hit."

Meanwhile, Winnipeg coach Ray Jauch is hoping his overworked defence doesn't have to stay on the field for too long.

"They (the defensive players) have lost a little confidence and I can't blame them," Jauch said. "It's only natural when they find themselves on the field three-quarters of the time with little chance to rest."

The Lions' defence, particularly the young defensive line, has been exceptional in the first two games, holding Saskatchewan Roughriders to four points and Grey Cup finalist Montreal Alouettes to 10.

Ends Richard Murray and Drew Taylor and tackles Nick Hebeler and Frank Landy have combined for 11 quarterback sacks in the two games.

Hebeler, however, suffered an ankle injury in the Montreal game and was left behind in Vancouver as Rapp will go with a 32-man lineup, one under the limit.

Doug Seymour, who lost his first-team position to Hebeler in the exhibition season, will take the young rookie's place. Reserve guard John Blake will do double duty as a backup on both the offensive and defensive lines.

The game (6 p.m. Victoria time) will be televised on the CBC's Western network.

Batesons win

LADNER — Saanich Batesons captured the British Columbia juvenile boys' softball championship at the weekend, beating Port Alberni 8-3 in a sudden-death final Sunday.

Batesons advanced to the final after compiling an unbeaten record in round-robin preliminary play with victories over North Delta (9-3), Vancouver Magicians (7-1), Ladner (6-1) and Barrier (2-1).

Legion facing uphill battle

Esquimalt Legion faces a bleak future despite having three players in the top 10 scoring list of the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League.

Ed Van Dyk holds down third place with 79 points, four more than fourth-place clubmate Tarey Pollock. Terry Jay of Esquimalt is 10th with 59 points.

Legion, battling for fourth place and the final playoff berth, faces Richmond Roadrunners in their next-to-last regularly-scheduled game at 8 tonight in Esquimalt Sports Centre.

The Esquimalt club finishes up July 31 against the visiting Coquitlam Adanacs.

Legion leads Adanacs by one point in the battle for the final berth but the Coquitlam club will have three games in hand after tonight.

Jet fans grab season tickets

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Winnipeg Jets have sold 9,100 season tickets as the organization prepares for its first National Hockey League season.

A release said all tickets purchased have gone to last season's holders who were given the first chance to buy additional seats.

The club's public sales campaign starts this week.

Abritrator upholds Rozelle's authority

NEW YORK (AP) — A challenge to the authority of commissioner Pete Rozelle to discipline National Football League players for conduct detrimental to professional football was rejected Monday.

Arbitrator James Scearce denied a grievance claim by the NFL Players' Association that challenged the commissioner's action requiring Randy Crowder and Don Reese to contribute $5,000 apiece to a drug rehabilitation program in Florida.

Crowder and Reese, defensive linemen with Miami Dolphins, were indicted and pleaded no contest to unlawful possession, sale and delivery of a controled substance in Florida in 1977. They were released from jail last summer, and as a condition for their returning to the NFL, Rozelle required them to make the contribution to a program of their choice in Florida.

Who cares about scorecard when first shutout arrives?

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

You can't tell the players without a scorecard, folks, even if Victoria Mussels manager Bill Bryk is changing personnel faster than general manager Lynn Chapman can get the new lineup printed.

Some 214 fans at Royal Athletic Park had to make do without new scorecards Monday night but nobody seemed to care as the Mussels recorded their first shutout of the Northwest League baseball season, a 10-0 romp over Bellingham Mariners.

The same clubs meet again tonight at Athletic Park in a game starting at 6 p.m. and another victory will pull Bryk's changing cast of performers into a second-place tie with Bellingham in the northern division. The game has been moved 90 minutes ahead of the normal starting time to accomodate travel requirements and a curfew will prevent an inning starting after 8:30.

In the last two weeks Mussels have cut four players — outfielder Bob Potts, infielder Steve Young (who has caught on with Salem Senators), and catchers Brian Edwards and Chester Nelson. Pitcher Mario Avallone, meanwhile, decided to pack it in and left the club.

In their place, Victoria has acquired catcher Gary Ledbetter, a second-year pro who was in the class "A" California League last season with Fresno and was cut by Bakersfield this year to make room on the roster for a New York Mets farmhand; infielder-catcher John Frietas who batted .397 this spring at Arizona State University; righthanded pitcher John Candiotti from St. Mary's college in the San Francisco area who picked up a win in relief last week against Grays Harbor Mets, and outfielder Tommy Dorsey from Northwestern Louisiana who has smacked three home runs in his two weeks as a Mussel.

Scheduled to join the club during a three-game series starting Wednesday in Bellingham is righthander Doug Mathey who pitched for Stockton of the California League last year and was also cut last week by Bakersfield.

There may also be a trade today, although Bryk isn't certain he can pull it off. He wants outfielder Nick Belmonte, a top hitter last year at Boise where he stole 52 bases. He's with the Salem this season and Bryk hopes to talk to the Senators today.

"With an independent team like us you've got to win," Bryk explained. "If the players aren't doing the job, you can't afford to wait for them."

Bryk is counting on Ledbetter's experience behind the plate to settle the Mussels' young pitching staff.

"Last year (as manager of the league champion Grays Harbor club) I had Vito Lucarelli behind the plate and he was definitely the one who won it for us."

Ledbetter was in harness Monday night and his expertise helped righthander John Caraher to his first complete game of the season, a five-hit gem in which the 21-year-old parleyed an excellent slider and fastball to his third win against two losses. He walked two and struck out eight.

Frietas, at third base for the first time as a pro, played a lead role at bat by driving in four runs with two singles and a double. Emil Drzayich had two doubles and a single, Pete Rabassa a single and double and Danny Purpura two singles for three RBI's. Jim Burton added a single and his third home run of the season, a towering blast to left off losing pitcher Scott Stransky's first offering of the evening.

Niekro brothers all even in majors' pitching race

By Associated Press

Joe Niekro has been knuckling under to Phil Niekro all these years.

But Monday night, he was a fingertip ahead of his older and more illustrious brother — if only for an hour or so.

Enjoying his finest major league season, Joe Niekro won his 14th game for Houston Astros on Monday night with a 3-2 decision over St. Louis Cardinals.

That was the highest victory total for a pitcher in the major leagues so far this year — until brother Phil also won his 14th a little while later, stopping Pittsburgh Pirates 8-0 in the second game of a twi-night doubleheader.

"I was looking at the scoreboard every inning to see how Phil was doing tonight," admitted Joe, who was doing all right himself.

The lesser known of the Niekro knuckleballers scattered six hits, walked only one and recorded six strikeouts, while improving his record to a sparkling 14-5 — a performance which brought applause from Houston manager Bill Virdon.

"Right now, he's got to be the best pitcher in the league, the way he's been throwing," said Virdon. "He's been ahead of the hitters. He's kept us in every game."

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago Cubs beat Cincinnati Reds 9-8 in 18 innings in the completion of a suspended game, then came back to win the regularly-scheduled game 2-1; San Diego Padres edged Philadelphia Phillies 6-5; Montreal Expos stopped San Francisco Giants 8-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers turned back New York Mets, 3-1.

In the Amrican League, Pat Kelly and Dave Garcia know their roles usually aren't starring ones — but they were both leading men Monday night.

"If I had my way, I'd be playing," said Kelly, one of Baltimore's super subs, whose pinch grand slam with two out in the eighth inning gave the Orioles a 7-4 triumph over Oakland A's in an American League baseball game. "We've excelled because we haven't accepted that role. We still have get-up-and-go in us."

Meanwhile, Garcia took over as Cleveland's interim manager, replacing the fired Jeff Torborg, and the Indians rallied for four runs in the sixth inning on a two-run homer by Bobby Bonds and Duane Kuiper's two-run single to beat Milwaukee 5-4 and end the Brewers' club record-tying 10-game winning streak.

Elsewhere, California Angels trounced Boston Red Sox 9-2, Minnesota Twins nipped Toronto Blue Jays 7-6, Kansas City Royals edged Texas Rangers 5-4, New York Yankees trimmed Seattle Mariners 6-2 and Chicago White Sox thumped Detroit Tigers, 11-3.

Joe Niekro's latest victory was fashioned with the help of Jeff Leonard's tie-breaking sacrifice fly in the fifth inning.

Phil Niekro, 14-11, meanwhile, outdueled Pittsburgh's Jim Rooker, the same pitcher he beat in the last Pirate defeat on July 13.

Palmateer sets price

TORONTO (CP) — Mike Palmateer says he wants at least $200,000 a year to continue as goaltender with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

The diminutive goalie was as responsible as much as anybody for keeping the Leafs in playoff contention through most of the 1978-79 season then broke his arm in the first round of the Stanley Cup playoffs.

Palmateer's agent, Al Eagleson, said the matter will be brought to Punch Imlach's attention when the new head of Leafs' hockey operations takes office on Aug. 1.

Palmateer's contract with Toronto expired at the end of last season, meaning he is entering his option year and could become a free agent after next season if he can't reach an agreement with the Leafs.

Blands take title

PORTLAND — Nina and Jennifer Bland of Victoria capured the women's doubles title in the Oregon State Open tennis championships Sunday but ran into the same form of trouble in the singles competition.

The Bland sisters upset second-seeded Jan Hasse of Portland and Doreen Irish of Washington State 6-2, 2-6, 7-5 in the final.

Cynthia Norman of California, who had dropped Jennifer 6-1, 6-1 in the semifinal round, topped Nina 6-3, 6-1 in the singles final.

Nina advanced to the final with a 6-2, 6-7, 6-1 victory over Nancy Osborne in the semis.

Plan surprises horseman

George Harknett, president of the Capital City Turf Club, has expressed concern over the government's proposed action in changing the responsibility for the final decision on racing dates from the provincial cabinet to the B.C. Racing Commission.

"I am surprised and concerned to learn that the attorney-general is recommending to the legislature that this change be made," said Harknett.

"This action appears to be premature as the government has set up a committee to review racing in general in B.C. We understood that this committee would review all aspects of racing in B.C. and certainly the setting of racing dates is a very important matter and one that this committee would obviously look at.

"In view of the fact that this committee would be looking at the question of setting racing dates because of its importance and in view of the fact that many groups including our own has expressed a desire to make representations to this committee we feel it is entirely premature to be prejudging the matter without giving the public the right to speak and to allow its own committee to report," Harknett added.

"It is to be hoped that, if the government does proceed, it will not implement the proposed change right away. In this way the racing industry will have an opprtunity to state its views and then perhaps the government can decide whether or not it should then implement this change."

The Capital City Turf Club operates a thoroughbred racing program at Sandown Park in the fall.

Three drivers score doubles

Hudon, Keith Linton and John Glen all chalked up double victories during the program, which attracted 1,206 fans and a mutuel handle of $90,750.

Hudon also won behind Banner Dundee in the third race.

Linton record victories with Bert Express in the second and Lady Fort in the fifth. Lady Fort and runner-up Auburn Tiger combined for a $117.30 Exactor, the second largest payoff Monday.

Glen's win behind Bachelor Eddy in the first race combined with a place finish by Jos Premiere for a $283.70 Exactor. He added another win with Lynn Collins in the fourth race.

Farmers capitalize

Farmer Construction took advantage of three seventh inning errors by Capital Radiators to record an 8-7 Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League victory Monday at Lambrick Park.

Ian Hood led the Farmer offence with four hits to drive in three runs.

Terry Adams, who was struck for five runs in the first inning, scattered 10 hits to record his eighth pitching victory of the season.

Long Spartakaid delays irritate American coach

MOSCOW (AP) — Bart Williams of the United States pulled a leg muscle while leading the 400-metre hurdles race in the Spartakaid Games Monday and limped away in pain. His coach criticized the Soviet organizers for making athletes wait 30 minutes between warmups and their events.

"It's not the proper procedure, even for the conduct of a meet this size," said coach Jimmy Carnes of Florida State. "They feel they need to sit the people down in a particular area and have them ready on the dot so they can run on that minute."

Carnes said he intended to complain to Russian officials and to the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

"We're going to try to get it changed for the Olympics next year," he said.

The Soviet Union's seventh Spartakaid Games are being run exactly a year before the 1980 Moscow Summer Olympics. Some 2,500 foreign athletes, including about 100 Americans, were invited to participate as an Olympics warmup.

Soviet athletes won all four gold medals in track and one in field Monday. Ludmila rondrateva won the women's 100 metres in 11.19 seconds; Ekaterina Porkvina took the women's gold medal in the 800 metres in one minutes, 57.13 seconds and Anatolj Reshetnjak won the men's 800 in 1:47.20.

Elena Goloborodko of the Soviet Union won the women's high jump in driving rain, clearing 6 feet, 3¼ inches. AAU champion Louise Ritter dropped out at 5-11¼, making it an all-Soviet finale.

Canadian star Debbie Brill of Aldergrove, B.C., who had a poor day in qualifications Sunday, won the consolation event at 6-2½, which would have been second place in the final.

Japan's Greco-Roman wrestling champion Totio Asakuro lost on points to Kamil Fatkulin of the USSR in the finals of the 115-pound class, but became the first foreigner to win a medal in that competition.

World champion Arif Niftulayev of the USSR was beaten by Vitzslav Maha of Czechoslovakia in the 163-pound class.

The Spartakaid Games, held every fourth year, before the Olympics, help the Soviets pick their increasingly dominant Olympic teams. They discovered a new women's javelin star this year in 19-year-old Saida Gunba, a ballet dancer from the town of Pitsunda on the Black Sea coast. She won the javelin event on her first throw, 206-11½, a Games women's record. Ruth Fuchs of East Germany holds the javelin record at 228-1.

Triangle gains final

Triangle advanced to the final of the Greater Victoria Little League baseball championship tournament by ousting Hampton 3-1 Monday at Lambrick Park.

Triangle now faces unbeaten Esquimalt in the final of the double-loss elimination tourney at 6:30 tonight. If Triangle wins, another game will be played at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Darren Murdoch pitched a three-hitter, striking out five and walking four, to record the victory while loser Steve Kelly struck out 10 and walked six.

Triangle scored in the second inning on singles by Vince Smythe, Bailey and Mike Croonen and added what proved to be the winning run in the fourth on singles by Croonen and Scott Smith and a double by Bill Gregoire.

Hampton scored in the fourth inning when Alex Thompson drew a walk, advanced on a fielders' choice and came in on a single by Jamie Maher.

Coaching conference

Members of the public are invited to watch the on-ice programs in the Level IV hockey coaching conference sponsored by the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association that starts Wednesday at the University of Victoria.

On-ice sessions and group meetings will be held Thursday through Saturday at Oak Bay Recreation Centre and the conference is expected to wind up Sunday at UVic.

Seminar co-ordinator Dave Andrews of Victoria said 28 speakers and about 95 coaches from all parts of the province and Yukon will be taking part.

On-ice programs open with a goaltending clinic Thursday at 2 p.m. by Dave Dryden of the National Hockey League's Edmonton Oilers. Laura Stamm, a power-skating expert and instructor with New York Islanders of the NHL, will be on ice from 3:30 to 5:45 p.m.

From 2 to 6 p.m. Friday at Oak Bay, checking and shooting will be covered by Danny Gare, captain of the NHL Buffalo Sabres.

Saturday's sessions from 2 to 6 p.m. will cover faceoffs, with instruction from Lund; offensive team play with Dave King, formerly with Billings Bighorns of the Western Hockey League; and defensive play with Bert Halliwell, coach of the University of British Columbia Thunderbirds.

Tom Maftechuck is the new men's champion at Uplands Golf Club.

Maftechuck took the title with a 72-hole score of 293, six strokes better than runner-up Brian Carberry, who finished with 299.

Bill Grant won the handicap championship at Uplands and Graham Carlow, Dave Ferguson, Jack Calvert and Neil Drewry are the Uplands Cup team handicap best-ball champions for 1979.

Second — Bill Harris, Paul Phillips.
Third — Eric Remes, Jack Drummond.
Fourth — Reg Elliott, Willie Eng.
Fifth — Bill Grant, Ted Parkins.
Sixth — Bill Cowie, Ted Kirby.

Canadian quota trimmed for Lake Placid Olympics

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Tickets for the 1980 Winter Olympics went on sale Monday morning after a news conference by the Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee during which it was announced that Canada would be receiving fewer tickets than was originally planned.

Roughly 350,000 tickets were made available to the United States.

Half of the U.S tickets sold to persons outside the Lake Placid area will go to tour operators who will package them with transportation and housing, adding unspecified surcharges.

Ticket prices average $25 and range from $10 for unpopular events such as cross-country skiing to $60 for glamor sports such as hockey and figure skating, officials said.

Canada will have 32,000 tickets, down from the 39,000 originally allocated.

Perfection aplenty at Bisley rifle meet

BISLEY, England (CP) — Louise Roy, 18, of Victoriaville, Que., kept her nerve and her aim Monday as the Times Challenge competition of the Bisley rifle shoot produced a record number of ties.

Scores were so high that even competitors who put every shot into the bullseye at 300 yards were counted out of the prize list on handicap.

One who lost out on handicap, although shooting a perfect 50 out of 50, was Ian Robertson of Ottawa.

Roy and Des Vamplew of Toronto were two of the lucky 15 remaining in the running for the trophy after two shoots. They will shoot again later in the week.

In the original shoot, there were 34 perfect scores. Fifteen of the 34 still were alive after five tie-breaking shoots. Third time up, Roy and Vamplew will be against three former Queen Prize winners and several marksmen of international standing.

Bob Best of Vancouver, a former cadet now on the Canadian national team, also had 50 in the Times shoot but dropped to 24 out of 25 in the shootoff to win a subsidiary prize.

Maj. Dave Rumbold of Ottawa was 11th in the Clementi-Smith aggregate, based on matches at 300, 500 and 600 yards, shooting 145 out of a possible 150, four points behind winner Arthur Clarke of England.

Rumbold shot a 143 and Don Sewell of Winnipeg a 144 in the Sunday aggregate at 500, 600 and 900 yards, to end up among the prize winners.

Debbie boosts victory streak

Pitcher Debbie Derkson remained unbeaten in league play as Stockers North Americans posted a 6-3 decision over Island Dryco Breakers in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game Monday at Hyacinth Park.

In the other game, Bemister's Welding and VI 90 Vicettes played to a 1-1 deadlock.

Derkson threw a seven-hitter to boost her record for the season to 12-0.

Crystal Lockyer belted a two-run double and finished by batting in three runs to lead the offence for Stockers, who have clinched first place with a 23-0-3 record.

Jan Noel doubled in the tying run for Bemisters in the seventh inning. Marilyn Bolton of Bemisters and Nancy McLachlan of Vicettes each allowed six hits.

Kraay quits Driller post

Kraay complained that several players and some members of the Drillers' front office were not loyal to him during a recent 14-day scouting trip to Europe for players.

The Drillers are in last place in the Western Division of the American Conference with six wins and 19 defeats and had just emerged from a record 14-game losing streak.

Kraay said the difficulties started when Peter Pocklington purchased the Oakland Stompers from Milan Mandaric and moved the franchise to Edmonton early this year. He said he had to haggle with Mandaric to make sure several players were included in the shift to Edmonton.

"Psychologically it was probably not a good thing for some players to move here. Many of them, probably all of the Americans for sure, would rather have stayed in California."

Kraay said he was proud of his players despite the Drillers' record.

Joe Petrone, the club's player personnel director, will serve as interim coach until the end of the season. Petrone handled the coaching duties for six games while Kraay was absent on scouting trips or because of illness and was in charge when the Drillers beat Los Angeles Aztecs 4-3 Friday to end their losing streak.

Cavaliers hire new coach

RICHFIELD, Ohio (AP) — Cleveland Cavaliers have named Los Angeles Lakers assistant Stan Albeck as the second coach in the nine-year history of the expansion-born National Basketball Association franchise.

Albeck, 48, was one of more than 80 applicants to succeed Bill Fitch, the only coach in the Cavaliers history and now coach of Boston Celtics.

Condo halt bid quashed

An application by Laurel Point residents to quash a Victoria bylaw permitting a 34-unit condominium development at 640 Montreal was dismissed Monday in Supreme Court.

Judge W.J. Trainor ruled in Victoria that city council acted properly and within its jurisdiction when it passed the bylaw May 31.

The 21 Laurel Point residents, represented by Felix Reuben, argued that the city did not give proper notice of a public hearing on March 22, that Ald. Murray Glazier voted in favor of the seven-storey condominium project without having attended the public hearing or having received a report on the hearing.

Reuben also argued that his clients felt council did not give adequate consideration to such matters as health, safety and property values which were raised at the public hearing.

Judge Trainor agreed with city solicitor Jacob de Villieres that proper notice of the hearing was given.

On the second point, the judge said Glazier had filed an affidavit stating that he had read the minutes of the March hearing.

Guilty plea in beating

Kelly Norman Lambert, 19, of 2844 Rockwell pleaded guilty Monday in Victoria County Court to a charge of robbery with violence in connection with the beating of an 83-year-old woman in her Esquimalt home last December.

He was remanded to Sept. 4 for sentencing.

Three other charges read before Judge M.L. Drake, dealing with the same incident Dec. 3, 1978, were stayed by the Crown.

W.J. Kennedy, also 19, was sentenced June 4 to three years in prison after pleading guilty to the same charge — robbery with violence — in connection with the beating of Julia Knoll in her home at 553 Raynor.

Charges considered in Active Pass

Charges may be laid in future against sports fishermen in the shipping lanes of Active Pass, a spokesman for the RCMP detachment on Pender Island said Monday.

He said complaints by the B.C. Ferry Corporation of pleasure craft interfering with the passage of ferries in the pass are on the increase in spite of patrols and warnings by the RCMP Ganges and Pender Island detachments, as well as that of the RCMP helicopter based at Pat Bay airport.

"They (pleasure craft) pose quite a hazard. The ferries have to make pretty abrupt turns entering and leaving the pass. I can see charges being laid in the future," the spokesman said.

He said ferry captains have been asked to take note of the names of boats impeding passage.

Heels dug in by trustees

Pressure on Greater Victoria school board trustees to make up their minds quickly about moving from their Foul Bay Road headquarters only prompted them to dig in their heels Monday night.

A letter from Camosun College board chairman Janet Baird indicated her board is impatient to get the school board's Paul Building transferred to the college as part of its Lansdowne campus. The college is anxious to take over the building before completion of its new multi-purpose building in September of next year.

Trustees expressed reluctance to make a decision, prompting trustee Dr. Mark Fisher, also a member of the college board, to say: "I'm really sorry to see people getting cold feet about transferring the Paul building to Camosun College."

But trustees suggested that wasn't the issue, and trustee John Young expressed astonishment at how a simple issue had become so complicated. He said everyone on the school board favors the Paul Building being transferred to the college.

"But any delay that has occurred has been caused by the ministry trying to saddle this (school) district with costs that should be borne by the whole province."

He explained the transfer would benefit the college, which draws students from all around the province. The board is moving to accommodate the college, but that agreement to move was given only on the understanding the costs of relocating the school board offices would be borne by the province.

Chairman Carol Pickup said the issue had to be pinned down on the original principle that the province was to pay all costs of relocating.

Trustees Winfield Mott and Dr. Martin Levin were appointed to a special committee along with two college board members. The joint committee will ultimately approach the ministry of education with a proposal for the transfer of the Paul building and the subsequent move of the school board offices to new quarters.

Events scheduled

A special events weekend will be held at three Vancouver Island provincial parks on July 28 and 29.

The programs at Goldstream, Rathtrevor Beach, near Parksville and Miracle Beach, near Courtenay, will include demonstrations of outdoor and recreational skills and activities.

Before the Judge

John David Large, 610 Niagara, changed his plea to guilty on a charge of dangerous driving and was fined $350 in Victoria provincial court Monday.

Crown counsel Ken Salt, who entered stays of proceedings on charges of impaired driving and driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent, said the incident began shortly after 1 a.m. when a Victoria city police officer stopped at Rockland and Cook noted a one-ton, flatdeck truck speeding.

A pursuit started and reached speeds of 140 km/h along Cook and 120 km/h along Dallas before Large's truck came to a halt in front of a power pole at Douglas and Toronto.

Court was also told that after a police vehicle had blocked the truck from the rear, Large still tried to maneouvre the vehicle to get away.

Defence lawyer Michael O'Connor said his client disputed the officer's estimation of the speeds attained during the chase and said Large didn't notice the emergency equipment until Douglas Street.

Green also placed Large on six months probation and ordered him to take the impaired drivers' course.

A Victoria West youth was given five days in jail after he pleaded guilty to two counts of breach of probation.

Anthony William Adamson, 17, of 708 Suffolk pleaded guilty to breaching two conditions of a probation order made by Judge Blake Allan on March 16 this year. Adamson was convicted of obtaining food by fraud and was given a suspended sentence and six months probation.

Conditions of the probation included reporting to a probation officer and making restitution of $8.40 to Romeo's Place Restaurant, 721 Johnson.

Salt said Adamson failed to report June 11 as ordered by his probation officer and failed to pay the money for the meal. Salt also advised the court Adamson was considered an extremely difficult person for the probation officer to supervise.

When asked for the reasons, Adamson said he was working outside of Victoria when the probation officer called and that he was on welfare and couldn't pay the restitution.

* * *

A 17-year-old who spent more than two weeks in jail was given a suspended sentence and placed on 18 months probation.

Gordon James Johnson, 1949 Crescent, pleaded guilty July 12 to six counts of fraud involving worthless cheques written on the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, Royal Bank of Canada and National Trust.

Green had denied bail and requested a pre-sentence report after the guilty pleas were entered.

Defence lawyer Edmund Rogers, in his plea for a "second chance," asked the judge to note that the monies gained from the bad cheques were used for neccessities and not illegal drugs.

Salt said that despite the fact the offences were committed while Johnson was on probation, he would support Rogers' submission.

Green ordered Johnson to make restitution in the amount of $876.66, to obey a 9 p.m. weekdays and midnight weekends curfew and not to associate with a co-accused charged in connection with some of the counts to which Johnson had pleaded guilty.

* * *

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: James Robert Haiden, 26, of 567 Traynor, $375, and Wolf Adolf Lehmann, 29, of 1009 Leeds Place, $100.

In addition, Lehmann was ordered to perform 75 hours of community service work.

Wishes but no cash in Minnie park plan

Saaanich Mayor Mel Couvelier today wished the Cadboro Bay Residents Association the best of luck in its bid plan to buy Minnie Mountain from Broadmead Farms and turn the 72-acre property into a park.

The Minnie Mountain property is located in the Cadboro Bay-Ten Mile Point area and lies between Telegraph Bay and Bedford roads.

"Everything's for sale — if the price is right," he said.

But Couvelier said he hopes the association doesn't come to Saanich to ask for money.

"Were the citizens themselves to agree to (buy) it, it would be a marvelous thing to do," he said.

He noted, however, association president Dick Boss proposes to raise only a fraction of the cost from area residents.

The mayor wondered where the association plans to get the rest of the money.

Broadmead's asking price would almost certainly be substantially more than $1.8 million, he said.

"Broadmead has a lot more invested in the property than that," Couvelier said.

Boss said Monday the land has an assessed value of $1.8 million, but admitted he didn't know how much money Broadmead wanted for it.

He thinks most of the purchase money could be raised through private foundations. He wouldn't elaborate on any fund-raising schemes.

Couvelier said Saanich is looking at other potential park purchases and can't afford to become involved in the Minnie Mountain scheme.

"We don't have a sugar daddy tucked away."

Boss has asked his association membership for permission to start negotiating with Broadmead while the corporation's development plans are in limbo.

Saanich staying on team

Saanich municipal employees will remain members of the Joint Negotiating Committee, Canadian Union of Public Employees local 374 president Maureen Nuttall said today.

The local met Monday night with the JNC to discuss reasons behind rejection of a contract offer by the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association (GVLRA).

Nuttall said the 500-member local will try to arrange through mediator Clark Gilmour another meeting with the GVLRA.

The local still wants to achieve its lost 1978 cost-of-living-allowance clause and will not break off negotiations at this point, she said.

Uranium deadline bid

KELOWNA (CP) — Environmental groups opposing uranium mining in British Columbia have called on the provincial government to order a halt to all uranium exploration by Aug. 6.

"If the moratorium is not put into effect by the government, it lends strength to the suspicion that the government is in the pocket of the uranium mining industry," John Moelaert, local chairman of the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, said today.

He said Aug. 6 was chosen because it is the 34th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima in which Canadian uranium was used.

Moelaert said that if the government does not ban uranium exploration, the environmental groups will boycott further hearings by the royal commission inquiry into uranium mining in B.C. The commission has held several hearings in the Interior, and is scheduled to hold hearings in Vancouver and Victoria this fall.

Earlier this month, Moelaert said groups opposed to uranium mining had been unable to obtain information from uranium companies and the federal and provincial governments.

He also said the commission was not fully considering whether uranium mining is in the public interest regarding social, environmental, economic and ethical points of view.

Whaler rescue in mid-Pacific

A Pacific Rescue Co-ordination Centre spokesman said today a Russian whaling ship rescued seven Canadians in the middle of the Pacific on Saturday. The Canadians were sailing from Japan to Honolulu aboard the ketch White Eagle. Names of the rescued Canadians and reasons for their plight are not available.

Police seeking back-up driver

City police are seeking the driver of a car that struck an elderly pedestrian at Oak Bay junction Sunday.

Charles Walker, 75, of 1610 Jubilee received minor head cuts in the mishap which occurred at 2:20 p.m.

A police spokesman said today Walker was walking around the rear of a light green Maverick stopped at a traffic light when the driver put the car into reverse and knocked him down.

The spokesman said the driver, descibed as an elderly woman in her late 60s or early 70s, was apparently unaware her car had hit the man and after a brief conversation with passers-by who witnessed the accident, drove off.

The spokesman said no charges are contemplated but officers would like to speak with the woman in order to complete the accident report.

Meanwhile, a 62-year visitor from Scotland badly hurt in a two-car accident at Vancouver and Yates Sunday night remains in critical condition in the intensive care unit at Victoria General Hospital.

Revamp not extinction for regional boards

The regional district level of government will likely be radically altered by next year, but will remain in some form, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday.

The day after he took over the municipal affairs ministry in early December, the controversial former Surrey mayor said trimming the powers of regional districts would be one of his priorities.

At one point, early in the new year, he said there is a 50-50 chance the fourth level of government would be wiped out.

But in an interview Monday, he said he has recognized the need for some form of government to deal with issues at the local level, especially in areas where there is no municipal government.

"One thing is clear is that we simply cannot throw out the baby with the bathwater," the minister said.

But changes are coming. He said his ministry will have legislation ready for the fall if there is a fall session, or next spring, if not.

The alternative to ending any regional type of government is to have everything run out of Victoria, which is just as undesirable, he said.

So whether there is a county system of government like in the U.S. and some Canadian provinces, or some other completely different form, some type of regional government will remain in effect in B.C.

Vander Zalm said he would like to see a strengthening of local government, but not additional local government.

The new legislation will be aimed at drawing a clear delineation of responsibilities and authorities at the local level so there is no overlap and delay caused by competing bureaucracy.

Regional districts are too large, for one thing, he said.

"We don't need government in the mountains. The moose and wolves and deer do well without government."

Some regions are so big the directors become remote from the people they are elected to serve, he said.

Vander Zalm has often reached back to his experiences as Surrey mayor to detail the planning horrors of a project needing both municipal and regional approval.

Rezoning applications, for example, go first to Surrey council which refers the matter to its advisory planning commission.

The commission reviews the application and sends it back to council, which then forwards it to the regional district.

The regional district forwards the application to the regional planning committee, which considers it and then submits it to the technical planning committee.

Many of these groups meet only once a month.

Hydro 'guts' slit: Barrett

BARRETT
. . . 'incredible conflict'

Opposition leader Dave Barrett said Monday the minute B.C. Hydro "finally had the guts to take a stand on behalf of the citizens of B.C." the provincial cabinet stepped in and undermined it.

Barrett charged the government ordered Hydro to end its participation in the National Energy Board hearings after the corporation tried to tell the board the proposed sale of 60 million more cubic feet of natural gas daily to the U.S. could hurt domestic markets.

Energy Minister Jim Hewitt has already endorsed the application by Westcoast Transmission to export the additional gas.

Halfway through the hearings, Hydro withdrew from active participation.

But Hewitt denied there was any intervention.

He said Hydro, as a public utility, is committed to supplying domestic markets with natural gas and had every right to appear before the NEB to raise concerns about the export of more gas.

They were the same concerns the ministry had before Westcoast assured the government there is ample gas for present and future domestic customers, Hewitt said.

But it is the NEB that makes final decisions, and Hydro's position simply assures that Westcoast must be able to convince the NEB there is ample gas.

Barrett said it is obvious Hewitt or someone in the cabinet intervened when Hydro's objections to the gas sale were raised at the last set of hearings.

One day Hydro's lawyer argued the position, the next day a lawyer for the attorney-general's ministry got up and told the hearing Hydro's lawyer will no longer be participating, Barrett said.

"There now exists an incredible conflict of positions," Barrett said outside the house chambers.

The minister claims there was no interference, yet Hydro at one point was saying the export of more gas was not only endangering future domestic markets in the Lower Mainland, but also the future line to Vancouver Island, Barrett said.

"I don't believe the minister is telling the whole truth," he told reporters.

Asked about a possible motive on Hewitt's part, Barrett said the sale of more gas will generate more much needed revenue for provincial coffers. (Hewitt estimates the royalties will be worth $75 million annually to B.C.)

But this grasp for instant money endangers the future gas supply to British Columbians, Barrett said.

Barrett, who has not often had good things to say about Hydro, said the Crown corporation "is trying to protect the gas users of B.C. while Hewitt is selling out to the U.S."

Hewitt said Westcoast has assured him there is lots of gas for both markets, and he is sure the NEB will agree and allow the pipeline company to go ahead with the sale.

NDP attacks Socred Indian policy

The system of Indian reserves was the first attempt in Canada at native land claims settlement and it failed badly, Labor Minister Allan Williams said Monday.

"Let's not repeat that dastardly mistake and try to resolve another land settlement problem the same way because if we don't learn from that historic blunder, then the natives will continue to suffer as they have in the past," he said in the legislature.

Williams, the minister responsible for Indian affairs, repeated that the provincial government does not recognize aboriginal rights and land claims.

He was replying to Al Passarell (NDP — Atlin) who accused the minister of ignoring the "heritage of the native people seeking land claims and aboriginal rights by hiding behind the cloak of the federal government."

"We, as immigrants of this country and province, have pushed the first citizens aside."

Williams said that "if aboriginal rights ever existed, and there is serious question about that, then they were eliminated during the time that B.C. was a colony, and if not then when B.C. became a province and a member of confederation.".

The responsibility for dealing with that aspect of continuing aboriginal rights rests with the federal government, he told the house during debate on his budget estimates.

"Our responsibility as a provincial government is to the Indian people who reside in B.C. as citizens of this province in the same way as any other resident of this province.

"We make no distinction between status and non-status Indians. We make no distinction between the Indian people and the rest of the citizens of B.C. so far as services from this government are concerned."

He said separate records are not kept of services offered Indians "and I trust the day will never come when we do."

Williams said it was never the policy of the Social Credit government or the previous New Democratic Party government to establish a department or ministry of Indian affairs.

"We do not intend to duplicate the tragic error which was made by the federal government in this respect. Instead, it is my responsibility and that of the officials who work with me to ensure that all of the services of this government are made available fully to the Indian people of this province."

He said if they encounter difficulty in getting those services, then they can use the services of his ministry to overcome those difficulties.

"We fully recognize that amongst some Indian people the relationships with governments and government organizations are difficult — and we're there to provide help. We are not there as a ministry or department of Indian affairs to treat the Indian people in a special way different from the rest of the citizens of this province."

Williams said the government recognizes the contribution made by Indians to the province.

"We recognize our responsibility to ensure that their culture and their language is preserved and in that respect they can count on the support of this government," he said.

"We recognize as well that over 100 years of unfortunate practices on the part of government has been to their disadvantage and that they may require special assistance in order to take advantage of full citizenship in this province, and we're prepared to help them there as well.

"But, other than that, they share in all the services of every ministry of this government without distinction — and so it should be."

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) said he felt sorry for the native people following Williams' remarks.

"That declaration of the minister reflects exactly what has been the attitude of the white man to the native Indian people ever since government existed in this land."

He said it is the "overbearing and arrogance of the white man that's reflected in that kind of statement — to cast everybody in one mold and to say to the native people, 'This is integration.' "

"The minister is saying to the native people deny yourself your own inheritance and your own culture and your own language and your own children and your own feelings and come my way."

Howard said the native has been able to retain his integrity in spite of declarations by people like the minister over the years.

"It is a very regretful and sad state of affairs to hear it enunciated in this so called enlightened age and by this so called enlightened government and minister," he said.

Terrace backs off Viet grant

TERRACE (CP) — The district council here rejected a proposal Monday to allot $30,000 on a matching basis to community groups or individuals wishing to sponsor Vietnamese refugees.

The money was a surplus from a paving fund, enough to bring four to five families to Terrace.

A recent newspaper poll showed that 77 out of 139 residents in this northwestern community oppose the use of tax dollars to support the boat people.

"I'm disappointed," said Alderman David Pease. "At six cents per week per year for each local resident, our community is well able to make such a contribution."

Mayor Dave Maroney said "Personally, I'd be happy to donate my own money, but not taxpayers' dollars.'

Strange companions move to Port Moody

PORT MOODY (CP) — There are several new residents at Buntzen Lake near Port Moody, but they're not the kind you'd invite over to visit.

A Kodiak bear named Doc, a black bear named Lucky, five timber wolves, a pick-pocket raccoon, a horned owl and a flock of sandhill cranes pretending they're whooping cranes, have all moved in to star in Strange Companions, a made-for-television Disney movie being filmed in the area just east of Vancouver.

There is a portable 12,000-volt wire safety fence set up so the animals — especially the bears — won't escape.

Animal trainer Mark Weiner says he's not worried that the bears might wander away. In fact, he's so confident they won't escape from the set that sometimes the film crew is kept inside the fence while the bears perform outside it.

The purpose of the fence, he said, is as much to make sure the crew doesn't get too close to the bears as it is to make sure the bears don't decide to do their acting elsewhere.

Humans in the movie include Doug McClure and Michael Sharrett.

"It's the story of a bush pilot who crashes in northern Alberta with a stowaway orphan, and how they survive in the wilderness," said producer-director Frank Zunaga.

Filming is scheduled to continue at Buntzen Lake and Daisy Lake near Squamish until Aug.4.

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. halibut fishermen are upset with a Pacific Halibut Commission ruling reducing their allowable catch this season, a spokesman said Monday.

Under the terms of an agreement with United States fishermen, Canadian fishermen had been allocated 5.4 million pounds of a total allowable nine-million-pound west coast catch.

Because of the overcatch, the nine-million-pound quota has been reached and the commission has ruled the Canadians won't be allowed to catch their full limit.

Halibut fishermen are meeting today to discuss the situation.

Meanwhile, results are expected Friday on contract voting by 11,000 commercial fishermen, tendermen and shoreworkers which began Monday.

Negotiators for the 7,000-member fishermen's section of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union have recommended acceptance of the tentative one-year agreement.

But UFAWU negotiators for 4,000 shoreworkers who work in fish-processing plants and the 600 tendermen who deliver fish from fishing grounds to processing plants will recommend their members reject the offer, union president Jack Nichol said.

Festival kills fish?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Organizers of last week's Sea Festival winced Monday as they were accused of killing fish in False Creek.

A Fisheries Canada spokesman said nearby festival activities may have created too much stress for 2,200 chinook salmon found dead last week after being nurtured for a year.

"Saturday night fever brought about by weekend activities . . . killed them off," said Dennis Deans of Fisheries Canada.

However, the abrupt death of the salmon, cared for by federal officials and students of the British Columbia Institute of Technology, remains a mystery to other fisheries officials.

McGeer considers probe

COAL HARBOR (UPC) — A demand by the Quatsino Indian Band here for an investigation into the firing of teacher Flora Sholdice is being considered by Education Minister Pat McGeer, a ministry spokesman said Monday.

After the dismissal of Sholdice, a probationary teacher at the Coal Harbor school, parents in the Indian band threatened to withdraw their children from the school unless Sholdice were reinstated and a formal inquiry held into the circumstances of her hiring.

Body recovered

CLEARWATER, B.C. (CP) — RCMP have recovered the body of one of three Quesnel residents missing since a boating accident Sunday on Clearwater Lake.

Newton Shilling, 62, Lorne Hunt, 71, and Raymond Wheeler, 44, were with two other persons fishing in a 16-foot boat that plunged over a seven-foot-high waterfall on the Clearwater River.

NANAIMO (CP) — Fearless Australian Gary Deathridge, who piloted his modified bathtub through eight-foot waves Sunday to win the Nanaimo-to-Vancouver annual tub race in record time, broke his ankle Monday in an impromptu game of tennis.

Union's ranks full

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — The Union of British Columbia Municipalities now has full membership for the first time in its 76-year history with the admission of the village of Lion's Bay.

Mayor George Ferguson of Abbotsford said Monday the union is the only one in the country which represents each municipality in its province.

Plant destroyed

ABBOTSFORD (CP) — An unattended fire in a garbage pile is believed to be the cause of a fire on the weekend which destroyed the Fraser Valley Organics fertilizer plant at Yarrow.

Line going through — Mair

SECHELT (CP) — The B.C. Hydro Cheekye-Dunsmuir line on the Sechelt Peninsula will be built, Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Monday.

Mair, following a meeting with peninsula residents at Sakinaw Lake, said his mind is closed on justification for the $640 million, 500,000 kilovolt line.

But he said "public hearings on environmental impacts, at a central location, are a strong possibility.

"The bottom line for you is justification but the government has already made a decision the line is justified," Mair told residents who oppose the line.

Mair agreed to visit Sechelt Peninsula last week following angry protests by residents and questioning by the NDP in the legislature over Hydro's announcement of a route selection across the middle of Sakinaw Lake and a government decision to bypass public hearings.

Residents said justification for the line is Hydro's Achilles heel, with costs climbing, alternative energy sources barely investigated and studies for a gas pipeline well under way.

"A gas pipeline would eliminate most of the need for Vancouver Island home-power needs that Hydro claims are growing so fast," said Madeira Park resident Howard White:

Spraying peril lingers

SQUAMISH (CP) — B.C. Hydro has stopped applying the herbicide Tordon 10-K in the Upper Squamish Valley since Labor Minister Allan Williams acted on residents' complaints that Hydro had ignored landowners' rights.

However, one resident said enough herbicide was applied so that homeowners will have to test water for the next two years in order to ensure the weed killer has not contaminated wells.

A Hydro spokesman said Monday that the utility had previously canvassed the region and received permission from three-quarters of the landowners to use the herbicide.

"We did not apply the Tordon to the land of the one-quarter of the people who refused permission," he said.

Wilson said residents were not properly notified that Hydro was applying the herbicide to control growth along a power line right-of-way.

"There were no notices in the paper, the area was not posted, nothing."

Some scientists say Tordon causes cancer in experimental animals because of pichloram, the active ingredient in the chemical.

This triple treat provides epoch-making evening

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

A sell-out audience at McPherson Playhouse Monday heard an epoch-making concert by a French trio, a Russian-Canadian duo and an American pianist performing with the Victoria Symphony Summer Festival Orchestra conducted by English clarinetist Gervase de Peyer.

It was the second Concerti Extravaganza concert in the Victoria International Festival.

A lifetime of concert-going has not provided an experience to equal the performance of Beethoven's triple Concerto for Piano, Violin and Cello by the Trio Rouvier-Kantorow-Muller.

This beautiful and challenging work was executed with superb spirit, a quite incredible display of fiery virtuosity and the musical intelligence and poetic feeling that made it a profoundly moving and breathtaking experience.

The total ensemble under the alert, precise and sensitive conducting of de Peyer, was finely balanced and secure. The orchestra was minutely responsive and clearly inspired.

Members of the Trio — pianist Jacques Rouvier, violinist Jean-Jacques Kantorow and cellist Philippe Muller — also enjoy independent careers as soloists. The tone each produces is warm, glowing, expressive, the technical mastery absolute. They have been together as an ensemble for 10 years and it is a close association of exceptional musical minds, unity of viewpoint, inner fire.

At the conclusion of this performance that will live long in memory, the emotionally high audience erupted in a standing ovation accompanied by shouts, cheers, whistles and applause that continued for minutes.

The fine violin duo of Dana and Yuri Mazurkevich, Festival favorites of the last two seasons, had the orchestra strings and the solo cello of Larry Skaggs as partners in a D minor concerto by Vivaldi. Beautiful expressive tone and a baroque purity of style characterized this relatively brief and charming performance.

Concluding the concert in another exceptional display of power, authority and sustained incredible virtuosity, was pianist Ruth Laredo playing the attractive and unusual Saint-Saens Concerto No.2 in G minor.

The keyboard mastery of this artist has been noted in several previous festival concerts. Her rendering of Ravel's La Valse, for instance, in the Keyboard Opulence concert Saturday, with which she sent shivers down the spines of her listeners. Yet she topped anything we had previously heard with this tempestuous yet always perfectly controlled rendering of the dauntingly difficult Saint-Saens.

Her tonal color has an exceptional range from a fragile delicacy to thundering fortissimos which rival anything the greatest male virtuoso could produce. Still her tone never hardens, her running passages are crystalline and except for occasional smudging with the pedal her command of her instrument is awe-inspiring. With de Peyer conducting the orchestra provided a firm and balanced partnership.

Sunday's concert at the McPherson provided the too-rare pleasure of encountering the artistry of pianist Audrey Johannesen in combination with Victoria's Pacific Wind Quintet. The ensemble performed Beethoven's Quintet in E flat Major, Op.16. This was a highly accomplished performance, beautifully balanced, lovely in tonal quality and color, and revealing in the last movement with its solo passages, the excellence of the individual players.

Also at this concert, just-arrived double-bassist Gary Karr was his customary excellent self in a group of pieces by Gliere, played in duo with Harmon Lewis at the piano, and another warmly sensitive and masterful performance by violinist Daniel Heifetz offered Saint-Saens A Major Sonata.

Arson rap sticks

NELSON (CP) — A 61-year-old man was found guilty of arson in county court Monday in connection with a fire set at the home of John Lededoff in Wynndel last Oct. 13.

Two women also charged with arson were cleared and all three were acquitted of charges of conspiracy to commit arson.

William Evdokimoff will be sentenced on the arson charge Sept. 24.

The two female defendants, Mary Malakoff and Mary Astaforoff, both 65 and Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, stripped in court.

Home-office ban vetoed

The clause almost went unnoticed until Ald. Douglas Watts pointed it out and said he didn't feel council had enough justification for removing the privilege.

With a potential gas shortage in sight Watts said people might appreciate having a doctor nearby.

The clause would not have affected existing practices.

Mayor Brian Smith said he had not been aware of the clause and criticized municipal staff for writing the proposed bylaw incomprehensibly.

"How is anybody but a bylaw draftsman supposed to know what this bloody thing means?" he asked. "This is no way to introduce legislation. It's impossible for anyone, unless they're a bylaw pedant, to know what this means."

The bylaw was referred back to A committee for discussion.

Where's that?: NRC geologist

SEATTLE (UPI) — Opponents of Puget Power's proposal to build the Skagit Nuclear Project at Sedro Woolley, Wash., questioned Nuclear Regulatory Commission specialists for more than five hours at a hearing Monday. The geology of Puget's location near the western Washington town has remained the critical issue in the hearings being conducted by the NRC's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board.

Last week, nearly 100 representatives of British Columbia showed up to voice their opposition to the proposed nuclear plant, citing a lack of evacuation procedures and displaying skepticism of the plant's safety.

University of Washington geology professor Eric Cheney Monday asked NRC experts if a sharp 1872 earthquake could have been centred in what is now Ross Lake on the upper Skagit.

"I don't know where Ross Lake is," replied NRC geologist Harold Lefevre, who reportedly anaylyzed geological conditions at the Skagit site. Lefevre said the NRC found the site "essentially equal" in risk with other possible plant locations.

Puget Power claims the site is free of earthquake faults and says the 1872 temblor was centred somewhere near Lake Chelan.

Opponents have challenged this, using preliminary studies by the United States Geological Survey which contends the plant site may be close to a fault line. The U.S.G.S. has also found the 1872 quake could have been centred as far west as Ross Lake.

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

The TV remake of All Quiet on the Western Front stirs memories for Lew Ayres who starred in the movie classic which won the Academy Award for best picture 50 years ago.

Ayres, now 71, became a star playing a young First World War German soldier in the original film of Erich Maria Remarque's landmark novel.

It is ironic that Ayres, a pacifist and conscientious objector in the Second World War, should have attained stardom in a war film.

"Essentially it was an anti-war film but that's not what the story is about," he recalls.

"It's a world-embracing kind of philosophy that showed for the first time the enemy being human beings like anyone else.

"It (the film, which traces the stories of seven German schoolboys marched off to the horrors of war in 1914) made us more globally conscious and provided more universality one way or another."

The TV adaptation of the story, a three-hour CBS special, stars Richard (The Waltons) Thomas in Ayres' role and Ernest Borgnine has the part originally played by Louis Wolheim.

"I don't know the names of most of the people involved in the new project," Ayres said. "The generation gap, I guess. But I hope the film will create the same sort of climate that we did a half-century ago.

"Actually, I wanted to see a similar movie made from the Japanese side of the Second World War. Not as propaganda but from a human side. Thirty years ago I tried to put such a film together but no one was receptive."

Ayers has dedicated his recent years to a study of science as it applies to religion and vice-versa. He tours with his 2½ hour film, Altars of the World, a compilation of the basic doctrines of world religions.

He also conducts seminars on philosophy stressing the thesis of Frenchman Teilhard de Chardin, the late Jesuit priest who attempted to reconcile religion and science in the field of evolution.

Ayres said, "I'm giving a two-week college credit course at Oakland University, near Detroit, in September titled 'Science, Evolution and Religion.' I'm immersed in the subject.

"I'd like to travel more but I'm an autumnal father. I have a 10½ year old son, Justin Bret, my first and only child who was born on the day before my 60th birthday. I feel the responsibility of not being an absentee father.

"I work in four or five movies a year now. I'm not a star but a character actor who plays old man parts, which is fine. I'm happy to do it if they still want me. It's comparatively easy work and I'm grateful they pay me well so I can send a little money to the boat people."

APPLICATIONS FOR NEW FM STATIONS DURING PHASE II OF THE FM POLICY

In its Public Notice of 18 April 1979 the Commission stated in part:

". . . the Commission will issue no further calls for private FM radio applications under Phase II of the Commission's FM policy before the end of the year".

It was not the Commission's intention that the foregoing Public Notice include applications for licences for low power FM radio broadcasting undertakings. Such low power undertakings having a power of 50 watts or less with an antenna EHAAT of 60 meters or less or the equivalent, on unassigned channels, are not provided any channel protection domestically or internationally. Therefore these low power FM channels would not affect the long range plan which is being developed for the extension of CBC network radio services.

The technical criteria for such lower power FM channels is set out in the Department of Communications broadcast procedure numbers 14 and 15.

Accordingly, the Commission is prepared to consider applications for low power FM broadcasting undertakings if they comply with the above noted broadcast procedures, and provided that the Commission receives from the Department of communications a Technical certification for such proposals.

GRAND PRESENT FOR McPHERSON?

Any music lover attending the Victoria International Festival concerts at the McPherson must have noticed the lovely piano and been delighted with the richness of its sound. It's a Baldwin nine foot concert grand worth $30,000, brought over from Vancouver expressly for the festival.

There is no denying the McPherson needs a good concert grand as a permanent fixture for such events as the six-week-long festival and many classical concerts throughout the year.

Aware of this, the Baldwin Company in Cincinatti has offered to reduce the price by $6,000 and the agency in Vancouver, Saxon's Keyboard Centre, have indicated that they will lop off a further $2,000.

But Monday an anonymous pledge of half the amount — $11,000 — was made toward the purchase providing the Playhouse Foundation can come up with the other half.

Anyone like to contribute? John Dyck will be happy to hear from you, whoever and wherever you are. The McPherson Playhouse Foundation is a non-profit organization so such donations are tax-deductible. Call Dyck at 386-8123.

Lake-killing acid rain poses threat to West

OTTAWA (CP) — Environmental experts fear the acid rain killing off thousands of eastern lakes could become a serious problem in the West as development of Alberta's oil sands goes into full swing in the next 10 years.

Sulphur dioxide emissions from all provincial sources, including sour gas processing, amount to about 550,000 metric tonnes a year, an Alberta environment report says.

Hennie Veldhuizen, regional head of the federal air pollution control service, Monday said from Edmonton that emissions are expected to increase about 28 per cent in Alberta over the next six years.

The resulting acid rain could also endanger lakes in Saskatchewan, he said.

Peter Rennie of the Canadian Forestry Service says increased oil sands processing may also threaten the delicate lichen vegetation of the northern tundra between Lake Athabasca and the Great Slave Lake.

"There is no problem in the sense that lichen is dying off now in the North . . . but that doesn't say we shouldn't watch the problem."

Acid rain results from a reaction of chemicals with water vapor in the atmosphere. Sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides, produced by coal-, oil- or gas-fired plants are responsible for the acidity which can fall in rain, snow or hail.

John Fraser, federal environment minister, said recently that acid rain is the most serious environmental problem Canada has ever faced.

Sulphur dioxide emissions from two oil sands mining and refining operations at Fort McMurray, Alta., are about 107,000 metric tonnes annually compared with total national emissions of about 6.5 million metric tonnes.

In a joint Canada-U.S. paper on acid rain presented in Washington recently, Rennie said: "Precipitation analyses show that the acid rain problem extends into Canada, covering an extensive eastern region as well as a western Alberta region."

However, he was referring mainly to sour gas processing operations in southwestern Alberta.

John Mar, northwestern regional director of the federal environmental protection service, says plans for oil sands processing operations at Lloydminster, Fort MacKay and Cold Lake in Alberta could create a concentrated industrial area along the Saskatchewan border.

"The total emissions would have significant implications with the sulphur dioxide emissions and acid rain," he said in a telephone interview from Edmonton.

Mar said a corridor similar to the eastern triangle encompassing Windsor, Ont., Montreal and Sudbury, Ont., could develop. This triangle carries the heaviest load of sulphur dioxide emissions in the East.

Hans Martin, manager of a federal study of long range transport of air pollutants, says emissions in this eastern corridor together with air-borne pollution from the U.S. have already caused irreversible environmental damage.

Veldhuizen explained that strict provincial emission standards, new pollution abatement technology and smaller amounts of imported air-borne sulphur dioxide from the U.S. will delay the impact of acid rain in the West by up to 20 years.

"But there is a potential for lake acidification in Saskatchewan parallel to the situation in eastern Canada."

He said sulphur dioxide emissions are expected to reach 869,000 metric tonnes by 1986 if oil sands development continues as planned. New plants were expected to be fuelled by coal rather than natural gas, he added.

Rennie's report, written by two U.S. Environmental Protection Agency experts, said sulphur dioxide emissions are likely to increase with greater reliance on coal as an energy source.

Air Canada wrangle ends

By VICTOR MACKIE
FP News Service

OTTAWA — The British government is no longer pressuring Air Canada to shift its British-based operations from London's Heathrow airport to Gatwick and may seek landing rights in the west in return.

The Canadian government threw its support behind its government-owned airline to retain the right to operate out of London's Heathrow in a struggle that continued for nearly a year. Canada's High Commissioner to the U.K. Paul Martin last January delivered a personal note to the British Foreign Office and Commonwealth Office expressing Canada's protests against such a move.

John Diefenbaker, former prime minister, early this year suggested that the Canadian Commons pass a resolution strongly objecting to the then British government's efforts to push Air Canada out of Heathrow. Don Jamieson, then Canada's secretary of state for external affairs, said the Canadian government was making its objections known to the British and declared the government strongly supported Air Canada's position.

The then chief opposition transport critic Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) told the Commons at that time that he understood the British wanted landing rights in western Canada. He suggested that the move to force Air Canada out of Heatherow was all part of the bargaining to get those landing rights in the west for British Airways.

In Canada and in Britain there have been elections since then and two Conservative governments have been elected. Mazankowski is now minister of Transport for Canada and well aware that the British are vigorously seeking rights to serve Calgary, Edmonton and Vancouver.

A transport department official said Monday that the struggle to keep Air Canada operating out of Heathrow has been finally settled in Canada's favor. A spokesman for Air Canada also confirmed that the pressures on the Canadian government-owned airline had been lifted.

"We understand that the British have dropped their insistence that we move. But they are not saying so publicly," said the transport department official.

Battle of the bulge has fat basset in doghouse

TORONTO (CP) — Patti-Burger comes from a long line of bassets bred for tracking badgers and foxes.

But it's unlikely Patti-Burger has ever seen a fox much less a badger and it's even more unlikely that she'd catch one unless she fell on it and smothered it.

Patti-Burger has a serious problem — obesity.

When she tipped the scales at 91 pounds, the veterinarian ordered a diet. But that was nearly a year ago and she has only lost 23 pounds.

"We had her on a strict diet and she is still gaining weight," says owner Bill Valliere. He and Roy Hayashi own Patti-Burger.

Valliere said they discovered that workmen in a nearby park were feeding the dog. They put a stop to that.

Until Patti-Burger loses another 10 pounds she will get only 19 ounces of dog food a day. But she'll be rewarded with a face lift when she finishes her diet.

"The rolls of fat are so heavy on her head that she has to throw her head back so she can see anything," said Valliere. "Once the fat has gone, there will be all that loose skin still hanging don and it'll have to be pulled back."

If Patti-Burger appreciates the gesture, it isn't obvious. Her tail is so fat she can't wag it.

Smoker bares sole

MONTREAL (CP) — Here's something to make militant anti-smokers think twice.

Cabbie George Kammermayer might have been ready for a little verbal abuse Monday when he asked a female passenger to butt out her cigarette. But he couldn't have been ready for what followed.

Police said the outraged client got out of the cab, took off a shoe and began beating Kammerayer over the head.

Then, she scratched his back and thumped him over the head with her bag, until she realized her miniature Airedale was inside it.

After she checked to see she hadn't done any damage to the dog, she yanked off Kammermayer's glasses, threw them down and began jumping on them. When police arrived, the woman was punching him in the face.

Beer workers back on job

EDMONTON (UPC) — Beer will be flowing in Alberta today after locked-out brewery distribution employees voted to accept a one-year contract Monday night.

The 180 employees of Alberta Brewers Agents, who warehouse and deliver beer for the province's three major breweries, voted 68 per cent in Edmonton for acceptance and 80 per cent in Calgary.

Wayne Robinson, vice-president of Edmonton''s local 285 of the Canadian Union of United Brewery, Flour, Cereal, Softdrink and Distillery Workers, said the workers were back to work 7 a.m. today.

The contract, retroactive to March 31, will give employees an increase of 79 cents an hour over the previous base wage of $9.26 an hour.

In the meantime, 91 workers at Edmonton's Molson brewery will remain off their jobs today in another contract dispute which began almost a month ago.

Decentralization to be curtailed

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will release details Friday of a plan to curtail a multi-million dollar program to transfer federal departments to the rest of the country, Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens said today.

The decision to put the brakes on the decentralization plan, announced by the former Liberal government, is being billed as a cost-cutting move.

Government sources said two weeks ago that some of the moves had already progressed too far to stop.

Rhodesia's toughest man-hunters trained to survive . . . and to kill

Screams punctuate bayonet drill

By JOHN BURNS
New York Times

WAFA WAFA, Zimbabwe Rhodesia — It was a bitterly cold winter night, the temperature near freezing. Beside Lake Kariba, 90 young men, black and white, waded into the water in camouflage uniforms. When they were up to their shoulders, a raspy-voiced sergeant on shore barked orders to submerge and surface repeatedly for 10 minutes, after which they were allowed out.

Then the men were directed to a patch of rocky ground and instructed to spend the night in the open. Six declined, emerging from the darkness with hangdog looks and asking for directions to the dry clothes, hot food and bedding promised by the sergeant to anyone throwing in the towel.

Of the others, 30 eventually made it through an 18-day selection course, gaining admission to the elite hunter-killer unit known as the Selous Scouts, which probably has not more than 1,200 men, 85 per cent of them black. Along the way the trainees tackled a murderous rope course, spent four days without food, went on a 15-mile forced march with 60 pounds of rocks in their backpacks and completed a 75-mile, four-day trek across bushland teeming with lions, elephants and other wild animals.

The average pass rate on the course — 10 to 15 per cent — is part of the legend of a unit that has more prestige among supporters of the Salisbury government's war effort than any other. But the legend is seen in different terms by the government's foes, who picture the Selous Scouts as ruthless killers who do not scruple at killing civilians, including missionaries, if that will advance the cause of victory over the black nationalist guerrillas.

Lt. Col. Ron Reid-Daly, a tough-talking 50-year-old veteran of the Malayan Communist insurgency who spent nearly 20 years as a non-commissioned officer before being selected to command the scouts when they were formed in 1973, dismisses the atrocity allegations, saying that none of his men have attacked other than legitimate military targets. The commander, who was recently reprimanded by a court-martial for insubordination, cited the charge as evidence of the fear the men have struck in the guerrillas.

"My men have tracked down 68 per cent of all the gooks killed in the war," he said over lunch at Inkomo Barracks outside Salisbury, headquarters of the unit. "We're the biggest threat they've got, so they try to handicap us in any way they can, and these atrocity stories are part of it."

Officers insist that tracking, not killing, is the unit's main business. They also deny charges raised at Colonel Reid-Daly's court-martial that the unit does a lucrative business in irory smuggling.

"Our biggest problem in this war is not killing the enemy, it's finding him," said Capt. David Scott-Donelan, the training officer, as he drove a land-Rover throught the bush to the Lake Kariba training camp. "Once we find him, killing him is easy, given his general lack of discipline and courage. But where we can, we'd rather call a main-force unit in to do the killing rather than do it ourselves."

The Selous Scouts take their name from Frederick Courteney Selous, a London-born hunter, guide and author who accompanied the pioneer column dispatched by Cecil John Rhodes into what is now Zimbabwe Rhodesia in 1890.

The bushcraft that was his trademark is basic to the young soldiers who bear his name. In 20 weeks' training they are taught to track humans exactly as hunters track game. They learn to survive in the bush, for weeks if necessary, and to simulate conditions on an extended tracking operation or on cross-border sorties. Their officers say that survivors of the course are among the hardiest soldiers in the world.

The selection course, conducted from the bush camp at Wafa Wafa, stresses self-reliance above all. "We try to simulate the very worst conditions a man is likely to meet on operations," Captain Scott-Donelan said. "Let's say he's on a mission in Zambia, the weather closes in, we can't pick him up, he's run out of food, he's hungry and cold, and he's being hunted. If we can throw all that at a man and he survives, he's the one we're looking for."

GRETNA, La. (UPI) — Talk about a bargain: A suburban New Orleans bank is selling the new Susan B. Anthony dollar for 80 cents.

Please, no jokes about inflation making it worth even less than that.

"No disrespect to the soundness of the dollar is intended," said Russell F. Haas, president of Guaranty Bank £ Trust Co.

Guaranty Bank traditionally holds a "money sale" when it opens a new branch, Haas said. Visitors to the bank's new Gretna branch will be allowed to buy one uncirculated Susan B. Anthony dollar coin for 80 cents on Thursday and Friday.

Farm owners must report

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. agriculture department says it has had numerous inquiries from Canadians worried about a law requiring foreigners to report their holdings of U.S. agricultural land.

Under the Agricultural Foreign Investment Disclosure Act passed last year, foreigners must report to the department by Aug. 1 their holdings of all agricultural, forestry or timber land of one acre or more.

"Some Canadians have interpreted this to include homesites and land devoted to recreational uses," the department said Monday.

Ray Fitzgerald, head of the department's agricultural stabilization and conservation service, said tracts of less than one acre that produce less than $1,000 worth of agricultural products in gross sales each year are exempt from the reporting requirements.

There are penalties for not reporting farm or timberland, but seizure of the holdings, which some Canadians are apparently worried about, is not one of them, he said.

Penalties could be fines of up to 25 per cent of the land's fair market value.

Fitzgerald said he wanted "to assure Canadian citizens that there is no intent in the act or regulations to penalize or harass foreign owners of homesites in the U.S. or land that is devoted to recreational uses." He said the law was designed simply to identify foreign ownership of U.S. land.

The law provides that any foreign citizen who owned an interest in U.S. agricultural land on Feb. 1 of this year must file an ownership report by Aug. 1.

Those who acquire interests in agricultural land on or after Feb. 2 have 90 days in which to file reports.

Desai support surges ahead

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — A regional political group gave its support to caretaker Indian Prime Minister Morarji Desai today in his battle to gain a majority in Parliament and form a new government.

The All-India Anna Dravida Munetra Kazgam, with 18 members of Parliament, is joining Desai's 210-member Janata party in the contest for for support against Charan Singh, former deputy prime minister.

Desai, 83, has less than 24 hours left to present the list of his supporters to President Sanjiva Reddy. The president has called on Desai and Singh, who resigned last Monday as deputy premier to become opposition leader, to prove their claims to a parliamentary majority.

Singh, who appears to be ahead at this stage, got a big boost Monday when former prime minister Indira Gandhi's wing of the Congress party gave him the support of its 71 members of Parliament.

The support brought Singh's total to 252 — 20 short of a majority — but this may change.

Two-storey, outdoor privy building, left, part of restored Wainwright Hotel on Main Street, and Northwest Mounted Police barracks used in Banff in the 1890s

Calgary's Heritage Park a must-see for tourists

Elizabeth Forbes

If your current vacation plans include Calgary, then be sure and put on your must-see list that city's Heritage Park.

In it there's a re-created, late-19th-century Canadian village, also an old town and an Indian encampment, complete with tepees, just as they were in pioneer days.

The village includes a working blacksmith shop and an old Alberta bakery, famous now for its peanut brittle, gingerbread cookies and fresh-baked bread.

There's a long-ago country schoolhouse and a log church (St. Martin's) where settlers worshipped in 1896 and that is still open for holiday services and weddings.

In the old town you will find a western settlement exactly as it was before the railway arrived.

Browse around a bit and you'll discover a miner's cabin with water wheel, ore carrier and mine shaft, built in 1883; a trapper's cabin with a real sod roof and a reproduction of the 1829 Hudson's Bay Rocky Mountain House.

The fully furnished ranch house on the edge of those meadows was built in 1887 and the barn that now houses early farm implements, in 1882.

A collection of firearms and other things used by the Northwest Mounted Police in the whisky trader era, is on display in what was the Banff Barracks, back in the 1890s.

You can buy horehound candy (jawbreakers) and dip into a cracker barrel in a general store where merchandise is all displayed in ways reminiscent of pioneer days.

There's a barber shop where you'll learn that in the early days a man could get a haircut, shave, shampoo and hot bath in places like it, all for one dollar.

A firehall, too, that was in use until 1909, where you will hear the fire bell ring alongside and look at long-ago fire fighting equipment.

Sometime during your tour of Heritage Park, you are going to be hungry.

That will be the signal to search out the Wainwright Hotel on Main Street in the village and enjoy a meal in the elegant atmosphere of its 1900s dining room.

Before you leave put your feet up on the shining brass rail of the long mahogany bar, not far from the dining room, and order a glass of sasparilla.

Admire, but for mercy sake, don't try your spitting prowess. It's a no-no!

There are many ways of seeing Heritage Park, other than by walking.

You can ride an old steam train, an electric street car, musical carousel, a horse-drawn bus or sail in the S. S. Moyie, a paddle-wheeler that will carry you on an unforgettable trip around Glenmore Reservoir, adjacent to the park.

The train starts at what has been named the Mindapore Station, a well-known stop in the Canmore district of Alberta, more than a half century ago.

"A-l-l A-b-o-a-r-d" is signalled by a conductor with a big gold watch in his hand.

You will sit in an authentic early train coach, hauled by a locomotive that was affectionately dubbed The Old Goat in Canmore's pioneer days.

That train will take you on a circle tour of the park. It will shake and bounce its way over old-time rails. When it travels around curves, the wheels will screech and sing.

Train crews include retired railway men with long years of mainline service. Now they work to bring back early days of railroading.

It recaptures the excitement, drama and the fun of a time that is now a part of history.

51-year-old off on CUSO stint

Edith Matous is off to Papua New Guinea as a volunteer CUSO nursing teacher at the age of 51.

Papua New Guinea is a small South Pacific country where they are still fighting malaria and leprosy.

Why would a woman with two grown children want to leave comfortable Victoria and go off to the heat and mosquitoes working for the Canadian University Service Overseas organization?

Matous says modestly that she doesn't need a full income and she has a skill to provide.

Apart from that, she has a sense of adventure.

When her husband died 10 years ago, she went back to university and took a degree in Canadian history, working at Royal Jubilee Hospital in the summers.

And 28 years ago she upset her mother by leaving her native Austria to come to Canada.

"All of a sudden you realize you have two feet and you have to stand on them."

CUSO used to be for young people fresh out of college but in the last few years it has been looking for more people like Edith Matous, people of any age who have a specific skill to provide.

Matous thinks people like herself are perfect candidates, people whose children are grown and who don't need the money.

She'll be teaching nursing to New Guineans. Aside from the malaria, the leprosy and the tuberculosis, she doesn't know what to expect.

"You can't really imagine until you get there so you have to take a wait-and-see attitude."

FAMILY

TORONTO (CP) — Queen Victoria would roll over in her grave.

Petticoats as dresses, camisoles peeping from beneath blouses, bloomers as culottes. One woman's underwear has become another woman's dress.

"Victorian whites," as they are known, once may have been hidden discreetly behind boudoir doors, but they have been stepping out into the street ever since women discovered that they are cool, pretty, and inexpensive.

They are the best sellers at many of Toronto's vintage clothing stores.

For Jill Reiniks, owner of Late Bloomers, a small vintage clothing and furniture shop, old clothing is a lifestyle. She collects it, she wears it and she sells it.

Reiniks began her collection about 14 years ago because she was fascinated by the quality of old prints and fabrics like silk, crepe and chiffon.

She also was impressed by the detailed work in clothing from bygone days.

Her hobby took her to antique dealers, estate sales and eventually England, where she found that her favorite dresses dating from the 1930s were more abundant.

Although she wore many of her finds from the '30s and '40s, most were kept in trunks in her attic.

"You take them out to gloat over," she says. "It pleases you just to look at them."

Reiniks estimates that she had spent about $12,000 amassing her collection by the time she opened her shop five years ago.

"I had hundreds and hundreds of dresses. I had a long rod in the attic running the full length of the house where I kept them all."

Although she hasn't noticed any discernible increase in business since last fall when "retro" looks became fashionable, Reiniks has found that her clientele has changed somewhat over the years.

She now has more male customers, but no longer gets many of the young, free-spirit types, probably because of price increases.

Ten years ago the store owner was able to buy a trunk full of clothes for $25 or $30 but she now has to pay that much for a single dress.

Despite the acceptance of second-hand clothing as respectable and stylish, Reiniks still finds that people throw away old clothes that they might have stashed away.

"They just don't realize how valuable they are," she says, visibly cringing at the thought of fine old clothes in the garbage.

Seeing double with new TVs

PARAMUS, N.J. (UPI) — Television viewers who think they're seeing double could be — if they buy a new set the manufacturer calls the first dual-screen TV available in the United States.

The 17-inch diagonal color set has a four-inch diagonal black-and-white screen that can be superimposed on either a lower or upper corner of the big screen to allow viewers to watch two shows at once. The audio portion of the second program can be heard with a special set of earphones.

So you don't want to see double? A button can cut off the smaller picture. Pictures can be switched at will from small to large, and vice versa. The set can also be hooked to a video cassette recorder to simultaneously monitor and edit out unwanted commercials on a program being taped. The price tag: suggested retail of about $1,100.

There's a time for loud and firm 'no'

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am a 14-year-old girl. Last week this guy whose two kids I babysit suggested that we have sex. He is not married, and for the last six months we have been really close friends. What should I say to him?

ANSWER: Say a very loud and firm "No!" If you really are mature for your age you would realize that saying yes would only lead to difficulties for both of you. It is against the law for an adult to have sex with a minor and at 14 you are still a minor.

It indicates a lack of judgment on his part to suggest sex with his babysitter, which would lead me to believe that he probably isn't a good risk to begin with.

I can understand that you could be friendly with your employer, but I think that you should form your close relationships with boys nearer your own age.

DEAR DR. LEVINE: My boyfriend and I are just getting to know each other. The other night, however, something happened which really scared me. We both got into a comfortable position lying down on the couch. Suddenly we were into heavy petting. Then he started shaking and making little groans and noises and he held me really close to him.

I know all about how guys have stronger sexual urges than girls and everything, but I didn't think that it would go this far.

What can I say to him next time to explain that I really get tense when all of this happens? It really scared me and I don't want it to happen again.

ANSWER: In case you still don't know what happened between you and your boyfriend, let me tell you; in the course of heavy petting (to quote you) he had an orgasm.

Now, I don't know what you mean by "heavy petting," but most teenage boys and young men would have difficulty controlling their ardor during the course of such activities, however loosely defined.

I don't think that it's a question of "fault." You were both obviously doing something because it gave you pleasure. If in retrospect, it makes you too uncomfortable, or afraid — as you suggest — I'd explain to your boyfriend that you really don't want to pet so heavily again.

It would be a mistake to do everything sexually because you feel that you "have to" if it is associated with anxiety.

You don't say how old you are, but I assume that you are an early- to mid-teenager. You have a lot of time to indulge in passionate petting — when you feel ready, and the age varies from person to person.

DEAR DR. POWELL: I am a 15-year-old girl and my problem is sweaty hands. Everytime I am around people, especially boys, my hands seem to get so sweaty that others notice.

I am the last person in the world who you would think to be nervous. I am a friendly, outgoing person who makes friends easily. What I am worried about is that when I start dating holding hands with a boy could be a problem.

ANSWER: Sweaty palms are embarrassing when you have to shake hands, but otherwise, no one really notices. It is a condition that is aggravated when you are nervous. Your hands become damp; others blush, giggle, bite their fingernails or chew their lips.

YOUTH CLINIC

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; Dr. Saul Levine, psychiatrist, and Bruce Vichert, social worker.

Some of these habits can be stopped by self-control; others such as blushing and sweating, are caused by a response in the nervous system and the blood vessels. The sweat glands respond to changes in the nervous system when you are subject to stress or embarrassment.

At least part of the answer is learning how to overcome your emotions, but do not be ashamed of these emotions.

You may very well find that the first boy you date and hold hands with has the same problem. Neither of you will notice the other's damp palms. You will find after several dates your sweaty hands are no longer a problem.

DEAR DR. COTTER: My problem is my Dad. He teases me about growing. He makes fun of my pimples and looks at my front. He also says I will be "getting around." Maybe that's true in two years' time but why does he bring it up now?

Also, he has a bad temper and he hits me or my sister if he thinks we are lying, but we are telling the truth. He can be nice at times and rotten at other times?

ANSWER: I don't think fathers or mothers should tease girls or boys about their sexual development at any stage of their lives. You seem to have more sense on this subject than your dad.

He is also inconsistent in his attitude towards you. But it is very difficult to reform other people, especially when they are your parents. You can hope that if there is any sincerity in his going to church and claiming to be a Christian that he will change his attitude and be a better parent.

Have you tried talking to your minister or priest?

DEAR MR. VICHERT: I am 17 and really mixed up. I'm not the type of girl who runs around with a different guy every day. Within the last five years, I've only gone out with three guys. The last relationship lasted 18 months. I really learned to love the boy.

There were three times he fooled around on me and made love with other girls. Three times I told him "you can come back only if it doesn't happen again." But he did do it again. The girls are all runarounds. They are the type to do anything with anybody.

Now I tell him I don't care. But I'm lying. I don't want to lose him by saying the wrong thing.

Should I become like those other girls? Could you please tell me what I should do, how I go about keeping him, or should I bother at all? Who is wrong? Me for what I'm doing or him for what he's doing? Please lead me in the right direction.

ANSWER: I can understand how difficult it is for you to love someone and feel that unless you change you might lose the person that you love.

It is a serious decision for you to make and naturally I hope that you give the whole thing some very serious thought.

You don't like the girls that run around, and you seem to disapprove of the way they behave.

Would you feel better about yourself if you were to imitate their behavior?

Would you be able to maintain your self-respect and the respect of others if you joined them?

I don't believe the answer to any problem lies in trying to make oneself worse, or giving up the standards one believes in.

What is it about the guy you are going with that you love? A relationship is something that one cherishes and hopes will last a long time.

Does his behavior give you confidence that he will be able to care for you, respect you, and be dependable for a long time? Do you want a relationship with someone that you can't trust? Do you really believe that even if you were to change he would change?

My suggestion would be to maintain your standards.

If you're shopping for a carpet, then you should look for the classification label — it will assist you in making your selection. There are three different kinds of classification labels: "L," "M" and "P."

"L" on the label means the carpet will keep a good appearance for a minimum of three years. The letter "M" indicates a carpet that will maintain its good appearance in heavier traffic and for a longer time than "L" carpets. Those marked "P" will stand up the best.

Some carpets that have not been issued a label because they didn't meet the standards set down by the Canadian Carpet Institute. Still other carpets may not have been submitted to the Institute for purposes of classification.

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

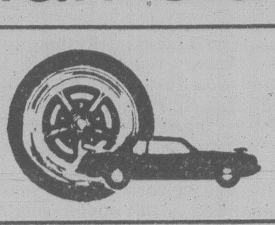
Check fan clutch bearings



WHEELS

by Mike Lamm

DEAR MIKE: My 1974 Chrysler makes a loud whirring noise when the engine is running. This noise persists for a short time after I shut off the motor. It gradually fades after the engine stops. The noise is present whether I have the air conditioner on or not. Is it the valves? — ASTIR OVER A WHIRR

DEAR ASTIR: No, it's probably your fan — bad bearings in the thermostatic or hydraulic fan clutch. I base this judgment mostly on the fact that the whir continues after you've shut off the engine. I suggest you get the fan clutch replaced.

* * *

DEAR MIKE: I own a 1964 Falcon Ranchero Deluxe pickup with bucket seats. A Ford-freak friend told me that this is a very rare vehicle. Where can I find out how many were built? — RANCHERO

DEAR RANCH: Right here — 235. Rare is right!

* * *

DEAR MIKE: My wife's 1975 Skylark, bought new, has never started right in cold weather. Where we live, that's almost every morning. The engine catches all right, but after it's run a few minutes, it dies because the choke doesn't open.

We've had the choke adjusted and readjusted dozens of times, the linkages cleaned, the heat-riser freed up and the whole carburetor gone through. Nothing seems to help. My wife hates to drive the car because you never know when it's going to stall.

Other Buick owners I've talked to don't have this problem. Can you give me a clue to what's wrong? — STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: If the choke isn't opening, that's what's wrong. You'll either have to keep pursuing the cause of its sticking, or you could install a manual choke to override the thermostat. Most auto stores carry cables and installation isn't difficult.

DEAR MIKE: My 1974 Maverick used to ride smoothly. I recently replaced all four tires with new steel-belted radials. The ride is now very rough. Can I install new shocks with helper springs to improve the ride and handling? — SHOOK-UP

DEAR SHOOK: Shocks won't help. The '74 Maverick's suspension wasn't set up for radials, and a unit-bodied car like yours tends to be sensitive to tire harshness. You might experiment with tire pressures between about 22 and 32 psi. Oddly, some brands of radials are harsh and others aren't. You apparently got a set of very stiff ones.

You're invited to send your automotive questions to Michael Lamm, Box 7607-B, Stockton, Calif. 95207. Not all questions can be answered personally. Those of broadest reader interest will appear in future columns.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

Size of child can be guaged

My husband and I are short. We are both 5 feet 3. Is there any reliable way to predict how tall our 10-year-old son will grow to be? He seems to be shorter than most boys his age. — Mrs. E. E. R.

DEAR MRS. R.: There are tables of prediction by which endocrinologists (gland specialists) can speculate about the eventual size of a child. In order to use these tables accurately, a complete endocrine survey is first made. There is probably no more complex or difficult study than that of the hormone content and the hormone balance in the blood and urine. In addition, x-rays are made of the "growing part" of the long bones of the body.

When there is a known deficiency in the hormone balance, treatment can begin and the rate of progress is used as an indication of what growth can be expected.

In normally growing children, it is said a boy 9 years of age and a girl of 7 have reached about three-quarters of their expected adult height.

It is important your son be made secure and happy despite his temporary height deficiency. Unless this is done, he may grow to be six feet tall and be left with psychological feelings of inadequacy.

Your son is now at the perfect age for you to seek the help and guidance of an endocrinologist.

What can cause a distinctly bad, unpleasant odor in the mouth of a child of 4? — Mrs. G. C.

DEAR MRS. C.: The nature of a child's diet is immediately suspect. Rarely, however, is this the cause. One of the reasons for bad breath is an infection of the gums and the teeth. This of course, can be readily evaluated by the dentist. Infections of the sinuses rarely occur in children of this age. Allergies play no role in producing such an odor.

Infections of the tonsils and, particularly, of the adenoids, are probably the prime reasons for such an odor. Very frequently, a collection of debris and pus can occur in the folds of the adenoids. This is known as a "Tornwaldt abscess." The bacteria that accumulate in such pockets of the adenoids can create a very unpleasant odor.

Even in a young child, this area can be inspected with tiny mirrors. If infection is present, if the child snores a great deal and if there is marked nasality to speech, removal of the adenoids would seem advisable.

Twins invent a language, baffle the experts

By CYNTHIA GORNEY
Washington Post

SAN DIEGO — The film is two years old now, and still riveting.

The six-year-old girls, faces alight, are rearranging furniture in a large dollhouse. They have short brown hair, little print dresses and eyes that scrunch with concentration as they examine each new piece of furniture. Their conversation, to the untrained ear, sounds like this:

"Genebene manita,"

"Nomemee."

"Eebedeebeda. Dis din qui naba."

"Neveda. Ca Baedabada."

"Ga."

The film was made in July 1977, at a San Diego hospital, and was the first recorded study of two animated twin sisters whose case has fascinated experts ever since the bewildered parents first brought the girls in for help. Grace and Virginia Kennedy, apparently healthy and energetic identical twins, spoke to each other in a rapid-fire language that nobody else understood.

It was not English.

It was not German, which was their mother's native language, and which their grandmother had spoken to them while caring for them during the day.

Somehow, in the extended privacy of a world without regular visitors, the sisters had made a language of their own — a "twin language," which occurs fairly often in very young twins, but rarely in children so old, and almost never to the exclusion of any other tongue. The Kennedy girls' only concession to English was an occasional request for certain items ("Want water," they would say, or "Want juice"), although it was obvious that they understood both English and German when someone spoke directly to them.

Poto and Camenga

They called each other Poto, for Grace, and Camenga, for Virginia. They had never been to school, or played much with other children. Until they arrived two years ago at the San Diego Children's Hospital Speech, Hearing and Neurosensory Center, the girls had never been examined by speech experts; their father, then an unemployed accountant, had been referred to specialists only after he told the state unemployment office, in response to a routine question, that his daughters were not in school because they could not talk to others.

And when strangers spoke to them in their own language, after careful transcription of what seemed to be the twins' words, the girls looked utterly blank — "like we are crazy," one of their therapists said.

"They call me Camenga," Virginia Kennedy says, bending over a sheet of paper in her sister's bedroom to print the word.

"Cause."

Because what?

"Poto," Ginny says, pointing at Grace. And that is all she will say about that. The twins know a photographer is coming to take their picture — "When is the camera man coming?" Grace keeps asking — but they do not seem to know why. Their language is leaving them, and if they understand their extraordinary history at all, they do not talk about it with strangers.

They are curious, charming and roaring with energy. They dive into their visitor's purse, pulling out pens and notebooks, asking what each thing is and whether they can keep it, fighting over the calculator which delights them.

"Where is your house," asks Grace. "I can see your house? I can see your house right now?"

'I sing all the way'

She is told that the house is too far away to see right now, that it would be a very long drive. "I tell you when it's your house," Grace says firmly. "I sing all the way to your house."

At 8 1-2, the Kennedy twins are second graders in special San Diego public school speech handicap classes. They have been intentionally separated, attending different schools and the language they now speak, both in school and to each other, seems to be mostly a simplified and very fast English — a sort of speeded-up pidgin: Tenses, conjugations and subordinate clauses — all the stubborn agonies of high school Latin and French — still give them trouble, and there is no way of knowing how quickly, if ever, they will pick up the more complicated nuances of standard English speech.

For the last two years, ever since the twins' much publicized arrival at the San Diego hospital, linguists and speech pathologists have been examining their private language in great detail, trying to understand where it came from and how it works. Three linguists at the University of California's San Diego campus have listened over and over to the videotapes of the twins, spending as much as an hour on each minute of tape, unscrambling vocabulary and charting syntax like the military analysts of some complex maritime code.

Was this an "invented language," in the most literal sense — the language whose resemblance to any known structure bore no resemblance to any known tongue — and if so, how had the words been formed? What were its vowels? Its consonants? Was it caused by some speech impediment, some inability to pronounce words in the people the twins heard talking?

The findings, so far, are tantalizing but inconclusive. To this day, nobody is certain about why, for example, a 6-year-old Grace Kennedy said, "Cabengo padem manibadi peetu," and her twin sister answered, "Doan nee bada tengkmatt." The explanation may rest with neurology or environment, or some apparently unprecedented combination of the two.

Grace and Virginia Kennedy were born in Columbus, the first children of a Gorgia-born accountant named Thomas Kennedy and the German woman he had met while travelling in Munich. (Kennedy has three other children from a previous marriage). The day after the twins were born, as Kennedy remembers it, Grace suddenly raised her head and stared at him as she lay in her hospital crib. She was having a convulsive seizure. Ginny had a similar seizure the following day.

"The pediatrician went into the brain area to see what was causing the seizures," Kennedy says. He says the doctor's tests showed a slight accumulation of fluid on the brain of each baby. The fluid was released and although the twins were given anti-convulsion drugs, they continued to have seizures off and on for the first six months of their lives.

Then, at about six months the convulsions stopped in both girls. Neither the Kennedys nor their doctor understood exactly why, (and there is still no certainty what effect the seizures may have had) but Christine Kennedy says the doctor, very tentatively, pronounced both girls healthy. "He said they were too small to actually say they would come out normal," she says. "He said it would take all the way up to their fifth or sixth year before they (the doctors) could see."

They rattled along

When the girls began to talk, they did what most children do. They rattled along, making noises that sounded like language, and they said "mommy" and "daddy" in distinct English. By the time they were six, when the family had moved to California, they were still doing precisely that. They stayed at home most days, cared for by a German-speaking grandmother who attended to their needs but apparently did not talk to them much. Kennedy says both he and his wife would spend their days out looking for work, and that when they came home and watched their daughters in animated but uninteligible conversation with each other, they simply did not know what to think.

"We had been cautioned that they might be mentally retarded, and we wouldn't know until they were six years old," he says. "We just thought it was a childhood thing between them."

It was not until the Children's Hospital therapists first talked about private languages, Kennedy says, that he began to think about what he had sometimes seen as the girls played together. Grace — the first born, by five minutes, and the more dominant of the two — would say a word to Ginny while holding up an object, as though naming it.

Experts can only guess

"Our best guess," says Chris Hagen, chairman of the speech pathology department that took on the Kennedy twins' therapy, "would be that it had something to do with the communicative environment."

"Or the lack thereof," adds Donald Kerbs, director of the speech, hearing and neurosensory center.

There is still considerable mystery about the origins of speech. Many linguists believe, for example, that children who are deprived of human contact before puberty (like the classic "wolf children") may never learn to speak normally, although there is no consensus about why this should be so. Still, it seems likely that a child who learns to talk starts with a basic neutral framework — the brain has to be in working order — and then, from the first afternoon when "Mama" or "cooky" sends the parents into ecstasy, some give-and-take system shapes the developing language. "Urglap" says the child, holding up a toothbrush, and the mother says, "No. Toothbrush."

Twins, and sometimes siblings who are close in age, commonly slow up this process by reinforcing each other's invented or mispronounced words. ("Urglap, Urglap!") If you put lively, identical twins in a household with limited outside conversation and correction, suggests Hagen, they might end up talking like Grace and Ginny Kennedy.

"Two human beings were there — Robinson Crusoe and Friday were there on that island — they did what was normal," Hagen says, stressing that this is only speculation. They rewarded each other. They were, in a sense, almost like the father and the mother and the child, all in one."

What the children apparently did, as far as speech pathologists and linguists can determine, was to latch onto the English and German sounds they heard spoken around them and reshape the familiar noises into words of their own. It took months of listening to the children's voices, sometimes replaying tapes again and again, before certain words began to make sense: "pinit" meant "finished," "gimba" meant "camper," "buda" meant "butter." The girls could pronounce words quite differently from one moment to the next, which made understanding them even harder; Richard Meier, a University of California, San Diego, psycholinguistics graduate student who worked on the language, recorded 26 different pronounciations of the twins' word for "pandaydooz" — in one 15-minute vidoetape.

There were some words that took longer still. "Toolenis," for example, had them stumped for a long time. They had figured out by watching the children that the word meant "spaghetti," but they could not imagine why. Finally the pathologists asked Mrs. Kennedy where the word might have come from, and she brightened immediately. "While cooking spaghetti, now and then, she had sung "O Sole Mio."

Their syntax, Meier says, was basically simple English — subject, verb, object — with a few striking exceptions. When the girls used the word "anmet," which seemed to be a distortion of the German word "enmechen," meaning to fasten or to fix, they stuck the verb at the end of the sentence, German-style.

What does 'nunukid' mean?

Some words remain untranslated. Meier is still not sure what "nunukid" means, or "pulens." "Mis" and "nea" seem to be pronouns, but he is not certain about that, either.

Ginny and Grace still report regularly to the centre for speech therapy, which is provided at no cost (although there was a recent lapse of several weeks because the Kennedys said they could not get the gas for the trip).

Is there some concern now that the twins will revert to their private language, despite the best efforts of pathologists and teachers? Alex Romain, one of their pathologists, says no.

The most maddening part of the Kennedy twins' story is that they may never be able to explain it either. There is no way to tell whether Ginny and Grace will ever remember the sound or the secrets of the private language.

But her eyes are so alert, so full of mischief, that it seems for an instant as though she must know.

An extra push for pedaller

BELLEVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Kathryn Ricketts has found added incentive to complete her cross-country bicycle trip — $10,000 for the mentally handicapped if she completes the 6,400-kilometre ride.

Miss Ricketts, 19, of Vancouver, left Victoria May 29 bound for St. John's, Nfld. United Commmercial Travellers, an international fraternal order, is taking pledges to sponsor the trip, with proceeds going to the handicapped. There are 21 UCT councils across Canada.

She said in an interview on Monday that 90 per cent of the money collected will be returned to the individual councils. The balance will go to the Richmond, B.C., council and to help cover her expenses.

Miss Ricketts said she tries to ride 112 kilometres daily — usually along the Trans-Canada Highway — but has gone as far as 192 kilometres in a day.

"It was on the Prairies with good tailwinds," she said.

"I wanted to see the country and the best way is by bicycle. It's also a good way of getting fit."

Bacon change on back burner

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Agriculture Department's plan to cut down further on the amount of suspected carcinogenic sodium nitrite allowed in bacon is being slowed down by possible problems with a potential partial substitute.

The department said some of the people who taste-tested bacon cured with potassium sorbate, the partial substitute, and nitrite developed slight swelling of the face and hands or mouth and throat irritation.

They also tested bacon cured with currently approved nitrite levels and with no preservatives so it was impossible to link symptoms directly with one factor.

However, one taster experienced a foaming of the mouth when tasting samples with nitrite and sorbate.

The findings forced a new study and thus more delay before the Agriculture Department can go forward with its earlier announced intentions to force meat packers to reduce nitrite use further and add sorbate to bacon — if the sorbate is found to be safe.

In May 1978 the Agriculture Department ordered meat packers to reduce the amount of nitrite used to preserve, cure, flavor and color bacon.

At that time, the department told packers they would have to reduce nitrite use further and combine it with sorbate in a year. That action was deferred this May because tests were incomplete.

Seventeen persons participated in the taste testing to rate samples on taste, appearance and cooking characteristics. Six tasters and three laboratory personnel reported adverse reactions in handling the bacon.

"We aren't sure whether the sorbate had any connection with the panelists' reaction," said project leader Brad Berry, a food technologist.

Donald Houston, administrator of the Agriculture Department's Food Safety and Quality Service, said any approval of sorbate use in bacon "will be withheld by the department pending results of the studies."

Child safety seat tests 'inadequate'

OTTAWA (CP) — The only reliable, but obviously unacceptable, method for testing children's car seats would involve children in real car accidents because current methods are inadequate, a federal study group investigating car seat safety was told Monday.

Car seat manufacturers, consultants, the Consumers' Association of Canada and officials of the consumer affairs department all told G.B. Williams, chairman of the three-man study group, that acceleration-sled and laboratory test methods are not good enough because they cannot accurately simulate crash conditions.

The CAC says 100 children a year are killed in traffic accidents on Canadian highways. Last year the department relaxed its standards because seven of eights seats on the market failed the tests.

Williams, a consulting engineer, Pierre-Yves Dionne, chief of Quebec's transport department's traffic safety studies division, and James Reichert, of the Defence and Civil Institute of Environmental Medicine at Downsview, Ont., were asked six months ago by Warren Allmand, then minister of consumer affairs, to review car seat regulations under the Hazardous Products Act.

Monday's public hearing was the first of two that will be held.

The regulations establish performance tests simulating accident conditions and lay out design and performance standards for seats and harnesses manufactured or imported here.

The products of six manufacturers are available. Only two of the companies, Dorel Co. Ltd. of Montreal and Questor Inc. of Toronto, are Canadian. They involve contraptions with harnesses, tethers to anchor the seats to the car and arm rests.

Although some seats sold do not have tethers which are anchored to automobile floors by heavy-duty bolts, the tethered variety are considered the safest.

Representatives of Dorel and the California-based Strollee Co. told the study group that their seats would not pass federal tests without the tether straps.

Although the tethers are an integral part of the seats, they are often unused because consumers find it inconvenient to drill anchor-bolt holes in the floor of their car, they said.

"Most people see it as an inconvenience," said one company representative. "They just strap the adult seat belt around it (the child's seat) and let it go."

This was by corroborated a McGill University study which showed that 56 per cent of more than 900 persons interviewed did not properly install their seats.

Joy Moon of the CAC suggested that better instructions or simpler seats may help eliminate most of the problems.

Opening lead — queen of diamonds.

Let's assume you're in six hearts and West leads the queen of diamonds. It seems likely you'll make the slam, but even so you're aware that the contract may fail if the missing cards are badly stacked against you.

It would make no sense to win the diamond in dummy, so you take West's queen with the ace and play the A-K-Q of trumps, hoping the jack will fall. However, East shows out on the third round and you learn that West has a trump trick coming.

All your thoughts should now be devoted to avoiding a diamond loser, and it becomes obvious that you must take advantage of dummy's long clubs or your mission will fail. If the suit is divided 2-2, dummy's clubs are all tricks and will take care of your diamond losers. But if the missing clubs are divided 3-1, you will first have to ruff a club to establish the suit.

However, you should deal with the clubs very cautiously. Thus, if you carelessly played the A-K of clubs at this point, West would put you down two by ruffing the second club and returning the jack of diamonds to dummy's king.

In order to make the slam, you should treat the clubs with all the delicacy they require. At trick five you lead a club to the king, then ruff a spade and lead another club at trick seven. If West ruffs, dummy's remaining clubs become tricks and you claim the rest.

If West does not ruff, you win in dummy with the ace and ruff a club. If West overruffs, you have twelve tricks; if he does not overruff, you lead a trump and again have twelve tricks.

The slam is certain if you give the hand the tender loving care it deserves.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Wednesday, July 25
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on taking a chance on your own creative capacity. Imprint style, personal meaning and signature. Children, charisma, change, speculation, excitement of physical attraction blend into scenario.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Home environment dominates — be aware of details, don't wander too far from familiar ground. Libra, Scorpio and another Taurus figure prominently. Take aim on security — don't be diverted by whispers of "sweet nothings."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid scattering your forces. Be versatile, accept social invitations, enlarge personal and professional horizons. One you met two months ago makes reappearance. Contact should prove constructive. Keep diet, nutrition resolutions!

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spotlight on production, responsibility, intensified activity and relationships. Binding agreement or contract could be on agenda. You could complete a very important mission! If single, that "situation" is up for discussion — heated.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You grasp "magic" of universal appeal. People are drawn to you with their questions, problems. Many individuals merely want to be close to you. Trust your own judgement, intuition. Be direct, stand tall for convictions. You could receive special recognition for past efforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What you seek is available, but temporarily "out-of-commission." Strive for truth by getting to heart of matters. Elements of intrigue, deception, mystery and romance are present. Leo, Aquarius natives figure in challenging scenario.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Accent on friendship, special business contacts, member of opposite sex who understand and appreciates you. Aquarius, Cancer and Leo natives figure prominently. Intuitive flash pays dividends — if you respond in positive manner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): One "in command" suggests that you diversify. Do it, but keep central goal in sight. Superior takes a liking to you; suddenly there is room at top. Focus on perspective. Expand without over-extending facilities. Gemini, Leo figure prominently.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Obtain valuable hint by reading Scorpio message. Reach beyond current expectations. Write, advertise, publish and distribute. Aquarius, Taurus persons play important roles. Pursue language, educational project.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Persist, analyze, take nothing for granted. Find reasons, locate sources. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives figure prominently. Emphasis on basic values, budget, financial status of partner or mate. Mystery will be "solved".

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emphasis on marriage, contracts, change or adjustment of life style. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently. Go slow, defer to wishes of one close to you. Diplomacy can now be a valuable asset.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Define terms — avoid self-deception, strive for realistic approach to situations, people. Sticking to basics will get job done. Know it, act accordingly. Another Pisces and a Virgo play prominent roles. You "emerge" from disappointment.

IF JULY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you are spirtual, moody, sensitive, sensual, your own worst critic and you are also a perfectionist. You like clean lines, abhor the superflous and you are affectionate, intense, dramatic and willing to fight when the cause is right. Pisces, Cancer, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. You travel in August, social life accelerates. In October, you have greater freedom of thought, expression and action. In November, a "serious" adjustment in life style occurs — could include a change of residence. You are inwardly shy, despite outer show. You are an introvert, although most persons — taking a superficial guess — might dub you an extrovert. You could be involved in "clandestine operation" in December.

WYCHBURY
SUMMER COURSE IN DRESSAGE
Begins Wednesday July 25, 1979
There is still time to register for this new and unique programme, taught by silver medal holder Frances Joyce. The complete course is 4 weeks, 3 semi private hours per week, in two sessions of two weeks each. A 1½ week break gives you and your horse a home practise period between the intensive training sessions, or you may prefer to register for one session only. The first session ends August 8, in time for the Cowichan Valley Cadora Recognized Dressage Show on August 12. The second session runs from August 20 through August 31, 1979. For information and registration phone Kim Young. 748-2228, or drop in at Wychbury Stables, Koksilah Road, 4 miles south of Duncan. Stabling available.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

GARDENING

Moist roots, juicy seeds

The question of the week concerns berry fruits (bramble fruits) some of which have provided home gardeners with a first picking.

The plants are growing well but the berries are filled with hard seeds which make them unpleasant to eat.

The reason for hard seeds in bramble fruits is insufficient water in the soil as the berries form and ripen.

The below-normal rainfall last winter and spring left very little moisture in the soil for the plants to pick up while making rapid spring growth. Deep watering was needed every ten days from early April regardless of clouds or showers.

Forty years ago the best wild blackberries were found along the sides of Interurban Road in the Marigold area.

The Marigold flats are a natural drainage basin with flooded farm fields in winters of normal snow and rain, and deep ditches were needed each side of Interurban Road to keep the thoroughfare open.

The blackberries which flourished by the roadside had a trickle of drainage water in the ditches when the fruit was forming and ripening. It was the steady moisture at the roots that gave the juicy, soft-seeded fruits.

Blackberries on the side roads leading to higher ground produced hard seeds, small fruits lacking juice, and were carefully avoided by the local residents. It was well known that the best berries came from the wet areas.

Getting back to the present crops in the home garden, nothing can be done to the fruits which are now near picking stage. These can be used for strained jelly by those who find the seeds objectionable.

Fruits forming now, and the types of brambles which come into production later, would show some inprovement if the plants are deeply watered immediately, with repeat waterings once a week until the crops have been harvested.

Deep watering is accomplished by applying a gentle trickle from the hose to the soil directly over the roots of the plants.

The jet nozzle, or the trigger control nozzle is not suitable for this purpose. Flare (fan) nozzles, known as water breakers in the trade, are good and tend to spread the water over a slightly larger area.

Canvas soil soakers are ideal for deep watering because a whole row of plants can be handled without constant moving of the hose.

The open ended hose, or the flare nozzle is laid on the soil a few inches from the plant stems and the water tap opened just enough to give a trickle which soaks in without running over the surface.

On sloping ground the trickling is done on the high side of the plants; on level ground at two or three places around each plant.

Half an hour in each position will allow the water to penetrate to root level and every drop of water used will benefit the plants. Repeat in four to five days on sandy soil and in seven to ten days on clay-base soil.

Many of the berry fruits we grow in the home garden are never seen in the market because they cannot be shipped as ripe berries. Picked sun-warmed and fully ripe, they are highly nutritious and well worth a little extra attention from flowering time until the crops are completely harvested.

Mines production a record $1.9B

Mineral production in B.C. reached a record $1.9 billion in 1978, Mines Minister Jim Hewitt said Monday.

Industrial minerals showed a sharp decline to $59.5 million from $79.2 million because of a lengthy strike at the Cassiar asbestos mine.

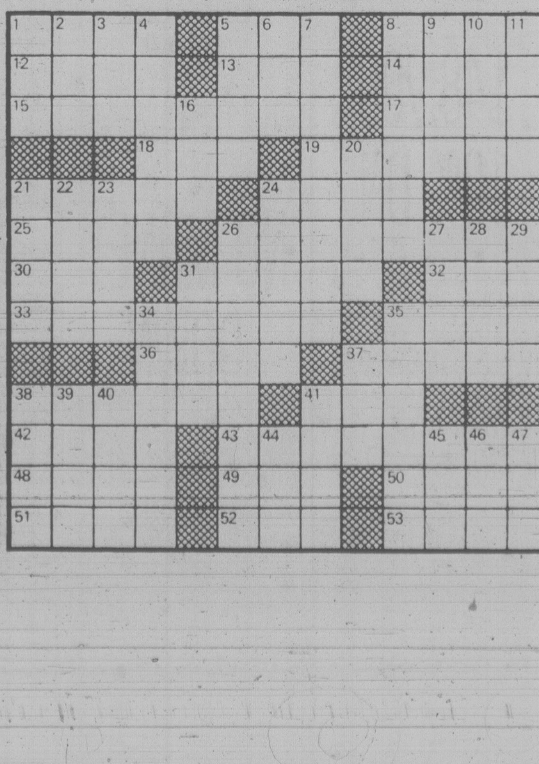
Answer to yesterday's puzzle.



No returning to paradise in dalai lama's Shangri-La

By ROBERT CRABBE
United Press International

(Editor's Note: The Chinese government permitted 35 foreign reporters based in Peking to spend a week in the once forbidden city of Lhasa, capital of China's Tibet Autonomous Region.)

LHASA — The dalai lama, 14th reincarnation of Buddha and once king of Tibet, is 46 years old and suffers from rheumatism. Twenty years ago he barely escaped arrest by fleeing to India under cover of darkness. Now he has been told he may return home — if he recognizes the Chinese as Tibet's rulers.

Even if he does, he will be powerless to save the withering Tibetan Buddhist religion that honors him as god on earth.

The offer from Chinese authorities was revealed to reporters who were permitted a week's visit to the Tibetan capital of Lhasa — "the roof of the world" — 11,520 feet high in the Himalayas, from which the lama once presided over the Tibetan Buddhist empire.

"If the dalai lama comes back and aids the motherland (China), the government will make good arrangements for his livelihood," said Tsudengdanda, a 72-year-old Tibetan who was secretary-general to the lama before a Tibetan revolt against Chinese domination was crushed.

Tsudengdanda, one of the organizers of the revolt, said he served four years in prison but was released after accepting China's communist program for development of Tibet.

Tsudengdanda is now a member of the Chinese People's Political Consultative Committee, which builds support for government policies among China's non-communists.

Even if the lama does pay homage to the Chinese and recognize their domination of the land where he was once the final authority, he will never again live in the Potala Palace, one of the most famous in the world, dominating Lhasa from a mountain top at the edge of the city.

It is now a museum, stuffed with Chinese and Tibetan art objects of incalculable value. Among them is the tomb of the fifth dalai lama, built in 1690, encrusted with more than 8,000 pounds of gold, valued at more than $30 million.

The tomb of the the 13th lama, who died in 1933, has a gold crust worth $4.78 million. Beside it stands a Buddha's shrine built of 250,000 pearls.

The 14th lama's life has been less luxurious.

In 1959, he and 80 loyal Tibetans made a desperate 300-mile dash for India through the Che Pass after leading the abortive revolt, traveling only at night to escape Chinese pursuit. Eventually they were escorted to the border by Khamba tribesmen.

Since then, the lama has lived in India as Tibet became an autonous region of China.

Life in Lhasa has changed, too.

Peking has sent 70,000 Chinese into the city and they now make up a majority of the population of 120,000.

All are political, technical and economic experts who operate the government and the economy of the 463,200-square-mile region, which is about three times as large as California.

There is virtually no intermarriage between the Chinese and Tibetans, although when they first occupied the area, the Chinese forbade Tibetans to marry each other, apparently hoping to wipe out the Lama's followers.

Old Lhasa is built around the gold-roofed Jokhang monastery, whose gloomy cathedral is jammed with Tibetan Buddhist worshippers on the three mornings a week it is open.

Tibet's diminished clergy are forbidden to teach religion to children and athiesm is presented as an official doctrine in the schools. No monks have been created since 1959, and all but 10 of 1,000 monasteries have been closed.

Losang Pingchu, abbot of the Jokhang monastery, said Buddhism eventually will disappear in Tibet.

"In my view most young people now believe in science and materialism," the abbot said. "So I believe that lamaism (Tibetan Buddhism) will be waning."

China claims citizen killed

TOKYO (AP) — China said today that Soviet soldiers at China's northwest border killed one Chinese and wounded another on July 16.

The official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency said a strong protest note handed to the Soviet embassy in Peking said that the shooting was part of a pattern of Soviet activities designed to create tension.

"The Soviet side has deliberately created a border incident of provocation and bloodshed at a time when concrete arrangements are being discussed for negotiations on the relations between China and the Soviet Union," the note said. "This cannot but draw the serious attention of the Chinese side."

Last week, the Soviet embassy in Peking said China unconditionally accepted talks on a variety of government-to-government questions with the Soviet Union. The talks would include trade, technological co-operation, peaceful coexistence and non-interference in each other's affairs.

The area of the shooting, China's protest note said, "is not a disputed area, for the boundary alignment there is clear."

Since the beginning of summer, it said, "Soviet soldiers have often intruded into Chinese territory to interfere with and disrupt the productive activities of Chinese herdsmen."

On June 30, it said, a Soviet military helicopter intruded over Chinese territory in the Xinjiang region and circled at low altitude to disperse Chinese flocks.

"This shows that all these Soviet activities are not isolated or accidental but are designed to create tension and threaten the safety and life of the Chinese border inhabitants," it said.

Bus driver falls asleep: 40 killed

JAKARTA (AP) — A bus driver fell asleep at the wheel, the bus ran off a bridge and crashed into a river, and 40 persons were killed and 29 others were injured, the Indonesian newspaper Sinar Harapan reported today. The accident occurred in the Batang district of central Java.

Galante fearful of a hit in jail

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (UPI) — Executed Mafia leader Carmine Galante apparently believed that his underworld associates planned a hit on him last fall while he was in jail, according to testimony in a newly-unsealed court transcript.

Informants quoted in the transcript said Galante began avoiding his fellow mobsters and doing crossword puzzles alone in his cell while guarded by a member of his own Mafia family.

The formerly-sealed record of testimony by FBI agents at a Nov. 2, 1978 court hearing in Bridgeport was opened Monday in the wake of Galante's death July 12 while dining at a New York City restaurant.

The court hearing was held because Galante, then serving time in a Danbury, Conn., prison, had objected to precautions that prison officials took to protect him from a possible hit.

Two FBI agents, whose identities were kept secret, testified that "reliable" informants within the underworld had told them there was a plan to kill Galante while he was in jail.

"He advised me that there would be a 'move' to kill Carmine Galante in whatever federal institution he was presently being held," one agent said of his informant.

Another agent said that his informant had suggested that Galante himself was aware of a plot to assassinate him, and had taken steps to protect himself while he was in the Metropolitan Correctional Centre.

"He stated that in September 1978, Carmine Galante's behavior in the MCC in New York City had become erratic," the agent said.

Galante, the agent continued, "had disassociated himself from fellow members of the organized criminal world. He was staying alone. He was having one member of his family guarding him, who was also an inmate."

There were several other mobsters of Galante's "stature" in the Correctional Center at the time, and Galante would "normally have communicated with and spent his day with" them, the agent said. Instead, he added, Galante "totally avoided" them.

"This informant did not have knowledge as to what this meant," the agent added. "He merely guessed that the man knew he was in some difficulty with his associates and that his life was in jeopardy."

Shuttle tests progress

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space agency officials ended 12 weeks of tests on the space shuttle Enterprise on Monday and said they are pleased with results.

"The program was a total success and we only found a half a dozen problems, which are being corrected," said Robert Buckley, shuttle operations chief at the Kennedy Space Centre.

The Enterprise was built solely for tests to pave the way for flight by subsequent shuttle vehicles and will not go into space.

Although the ground tests have been successful, one shuttle official said a new problem has been discovered with the shuttle vehicle. Dr. Robert Gray said the new problem is the possibility of ice forming on the outside of the shuttle's fuel tanks.

Gray said the ice might fall off during launch and damage portions of the winged spaceship.

U.S. government pamplet tells how to breach N-site

By GLENN FRANKEL
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. government has published and made publicly available at least a half-dozen documents outlining ways to break into nuclear power plants and other atomic facilities.

"Barrier Penetration Database," an illustrated Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) report issued in June, 1978, describes 32 physical security barriers commonly found at nuclear plants. The report suggests specific bolt cutters, crowbars and other tools as well as the exact amount of explosives needed to breach each barrier. It even tells how long penetration would take, down to a fraction of a minute.

The report is based on the more extensive "Barrier Technology Handbook," prepared in 1977 for the Department of Energy (DOE) by Sandia Laboratories of New Mexico, which describes methods to break through more than 130 physical barriers considered for use at DOE facilities.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has distributed both publications to many of its more than 130 public document rooms, which are at libraries near every operating or proposed nuclear plant in the U.S. They also can be bought by mail from the government's National Technieal Information Service in Springfield, Va.

The purpose of the publications, federal officials say, is to help agencies and operators of nuclear plants and other installations evaluate security at their sites. Because the reports describe security measures in general rather than at specific sites, officials believe they would not be of great help to potential saboteurs.

Even so, many involved in compiling and publishing the reports say they are uneasy about their ready availablity.

"I don't think it's really increased the risk of a break-in at a particular plant, but if I had my druthers I would not have distributed it publiclly," says Robert Clark, chief of the NRC's safeguards branch.

"The bureaucratic answer is that we've followed all the necessary guidelines and the information released is okay," says William Myre, Sandia's nuclear security systems director. "My personal answer is yes, I'm concerned, and yes, we do worry about it."

"These kinds of things make us very uneasy," says Frank Graham of the Atomic Industrial Forum, a group that represents the nuclear industry. "It could put ideas into a lot of people's heads."

"It's the old story," says Leonard Weiss, staff director of a Senate nuclear proliferation subcommittee that has held a series of hearings on government distribution of potentially sensitive security information. "Any one piece of information by itself is nothing, but when you see it all together (in a manual), you begin to get a picture that could be very helpful to a terrorist."

The Department of Energy and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission have review groups that cleared the reports for public release.

"It's a double-edged sword," said one DOE safeguards official who asked not to be named. "We're trying to get important information to the DOE and NRC communities without tipping off the wrong people."

Ottawa sets 3-year restraint

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canadians face two to three years of restraint before the Conservative government will be able to clean up a decade of Liberal economic mismanagement, Finance Minister John Crosbie said today.

He could not promise any "economic miracles to change around the Canadian economy overnight," Crosbie added.

The government probably will announce the first of its restraint programs later this week, he added.

Crosbie defended his decision to raise the Bank of Canada's prime lending rate by half a per cent Sunday to a record high of 11.75 per cent, charging that the Liberal government ran the economy out of control and allowed successive bank interest increases.

"In the present situation we had to act quickly and increase the rates. If we hadn't acted, the downward trend on the Canadian dollar would have been hard to stop."

He said the country this year is headed towards a $7-billion deficit in its trade in goods and services with the rest of the world. That would be a sharp increase from the $5.2-billion deficit in the "current account" recorded last year.

The need to keep investment flowing in to offset the chronic current account deficit was cited as a major reason for the move which caused banks and mortgage companies to raise their lending rates.

In spite of the move, which followed a similar rise in U.S. interest rates last week, the dollar dropped more than one-fifth of a cent on currency markets Monday to 85.76 cents U.S.

Canada had a record $3.5-billion surplus in its trade in goods with the rest of the world in 1978. But this was more than offset by payments for services such as shipping, dividend payments to foreigners and spending on foreign travel.

The result was the record $5.2-billion "current account" deficit.

This surplus of Canadian dollars abroad was the major reason for their decline in value. The Bank of Canada used its foreign currency reserves to buy Canadian dollars in an attempt to arrest the decline.

The central bank was forced to arrange loans from domestic and foreign banks to replenish the reserves.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark has informed U.S. President Jimmy Carter that in the coming weeks the Canadian government will be announcing the broad lines of its energy program to ensure a "rapid reduction" in Canada's dependence on foreign oil.

The program will move this country "effectively toward energy self-sufficiency," the prime minister assured the president.

"I am confident these measures will enable our country to meet and even improve upon our Tokyo summit goals," he told Carter in a letter made public today.

MPs back Oct. 9

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark has decided to call Parliament Oct. 9, giving "the highest possible priority" to legislation to remove secrecy from government operations, Progressive Conservative House Leader Walter Baker announced today.

Another priority for the minority government is reforming the rules of Parliament so MPs will have more power to bring the government to account, Baker said.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer will open the 31st Parliament when he delivers his first throne speech, outlining the legislative program of the first Conservative government since John Diefenbaker's administration was defeated in 1963.

"We will be able to say to Parliament, for the first time in a long time, 'these are the bills we intend to introduce'," Baker said.

He said economic legislation would be near the top of the list, but that the government did not intend immediately to introduce a bill to abolish Petro-Canada, a Conservative proposal during the campaign for the May 22 election.

Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen criticized the government for delaying the opening of Parliament

All entries should be in the mailbox by midnight tonight in order to guarantee delivery in time.

Entries can continue to be brought in, in person, to the Victoria Times, or to a participating sporting goods or hardware store until close of business Wednesday. Some locations will be able to receive entries up to collection time which is Thursday noon.

Downtown - Ray's Sports Centre, 1692 Douglas.

Oak Bay - Oak Bay Sporting Goods, 2077 Oak Bay.

Gorge - Premier Sports & Cycle, 2965 Tillicum.

Colwood, Langford - Alexander's Sporting Goods, 2244 Sooke.

Sooke - Westbrook Sooke Hardware, 2038 Otter Point.

Sidney - Harvey's Sporting Goods, 7485 Beacon.

The race is in three sections: men, women and mixed. Trophies for first, second, and third are presented in each section.

There will be a parade of contestants immediately before the race and parade trophies are also awarded in three categories: men, women and mixed.

Spectators will get a good view of the race either at the finish line or from the park across the Gorge. Because race markers will force contestants far to the left, there will be a close-up view for spectators along Gorge Road.

Check-in time for contestants at Gorge Park is noon. The parade begins from the finish line at 12:30 p.m. The parade ends at Craigflower Bridge, which is the starting point for the race. Races start about 1:15 p.m.

NDP MP harbors refugee

VANCOUVER (CP) — An NDP member of Parliament said Monday he will harbor a Chilean refugee in his home against federal government attempts to deport him.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson said the immigration department is preparing to seize Galindo Madrid and fly him to the east coast to rejoin the ship he abandoned two years ago.

"I am confident that there will be no attempts to violate the sanctity of my home," said Robinson.

He said immigration officials were planning to seize Madrid Monday but he heard of the attempt and extracted a promise from the immigration department that nothing would be done until noon today.

Immigration officials were going to fly Madrid to St. John's, Nfld. to join the Greek freighter Star Pride which he fled in Squamish, B.C., in March, 1977, Robinson said.

Since then Madrid has made repeated attempts to gain political refugee status but all have been refused including a final appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal.

He has been working in a downtown restaurant as a dishwasher and living in Vancouver's West End.

Madrid told a news conference that he fears for his life if he is sent to Chile where he was an active supporter of deposed Socialist President Salvador Allende.

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Commerce workers have sent a note to the labor minister complaining that since 1975 their wages have risen by only 3,175.4 per cent.

The cost of living during the same period has increased by 13,850 per cent under Argentina's worldrecord inflation rate, the General Confederation of Commercial Employees said Monday.

The group sent the note to Labor Minister Llamil Reston demanding an emergency wage increase to meet "the abysmal drop" in their earnings.

NON-UNION LABOR used last week in construction work at the B.C. Buildings Corporation headquarters in Harbor Square brought out pickets this morning and kept 100 government employees off the job for an hour. The pickets came from the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council which said the work was done by Perma Construction. The non-union work was legal, however, because NDP-introduced legislation requiring government work to be done by union members has been repealed by the Socreds.

Fire hazard idles 1,700

About 1,700 Vancouver Island loggers have been idled as a result of tinder-dry forests.

MacMillan Bloedel spokesman Doug Coupar said today operations at Kelsey Bay, Chemainus and Shawnigan Lake have been shut down.

Two other operations — Sproat Lake and Northwest Bay — have been put on early shift to keep the loggers out of the woods during the hottest part of the day.

About 800 MacBlo employees have been idled.

Nearly 400 B.C. Forest Products employees are off the job as the company has been forced to partially close operations at Renfrew and Caycuse.

A BCFP spokesman said some of the workers are being kept busy on road work and other jobs out of the woods.

He said so far nobody is complaining about the time off work.

"The guys like a little holiday," he said.

However, if the weather continues hot for more than three weeks, then the loggers will begin complaining, he added.

About 125 Rayonier of Canada employees at Jordan River and Gordon River have also been idled.

Meanwhile, B.C. forest fires continue to take their toll, burning more than 9,500 hectares so far this year.

Provincial protection officer Arnold Ginnever said the Kamloops area was hardest hit by the number of fires, with about 700 compared to about 200 at this time last year.

However, he said most of the damage was done in the Prince George area and fires there claimed more than two-thirds of the total timber burned in the province.

More than one thousand men and a battery of equipment, including cats, skidders, helicopters and air tankers, continue to fight the more than 370 fires still burning.

Meanwhile, about 1,400 hectares of bush are burning a few miles west of the Okanogan Valley in Washington state.

About 500 men are fighting the blaze and another 300 firefighters are being brought in from Idaho to check the fire which apparently started in a garage on government land.

Ginnever said all B.C. fires are under control but about six or seven continue to cause crews difficulty and the fire hazard in the Interior is rated extreme with campfire bans still in effect.

Vander Zalm softens stand

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm today tried to play down the cabinet stir he caused Monday by revealing details of the new auto insurance scheme that will end discriminatory rates.

The minister had detailed plans of the Insurance Corp. of B.C. to soften the impact of the loss of revenue that will be created when bad drivers have their records wiped clean so everyone in B.C. will pay the same insurance premium next year.

But today he softened his position, saying he was simply voicing his own opinion based on a common sense analyses of the new legislation.

"I said there would not be a substantial increase in rates next year. I don't think there will be. I was concerned that some headlines last week were giving the impression there would be," he said.

"I was asked if ICBC had enough funds to cover the anti-discrimination program. I said that if ICBC had a good year it would probably have a good surplus of between $15 million and $20 million and common sense dictates that it be used to keep the rates down as low as possible.

"I said that in my opinion safe driver discounts should be discontinued but I didn't say that would be policy.

"It just wouldn't make any sense to keep them going if safe drivers were being compensated by lower rates anyway," he said.

The earlier comments made to a Times reporter and a radio reporter were much stronger and apparently landed the controversial minister in hot water.

The new legislation designed to end all discrimination — age, sex, marital status and geographic location — was introduced in the house last week by deputy premier Grace McCarthy who has responsibility for the government-controlled insurance corporation.

At her press conference, however, reporters were dissatisfied with the meagre details she divulged.

Vander Zalm told the Times on Monday the press had the wrong impression when they reported rates would increase next year as the new program comes on stream.

He said other than normal inflation rates won't go up and explained the fund that will ease any increases over the next five years.

He also said the common

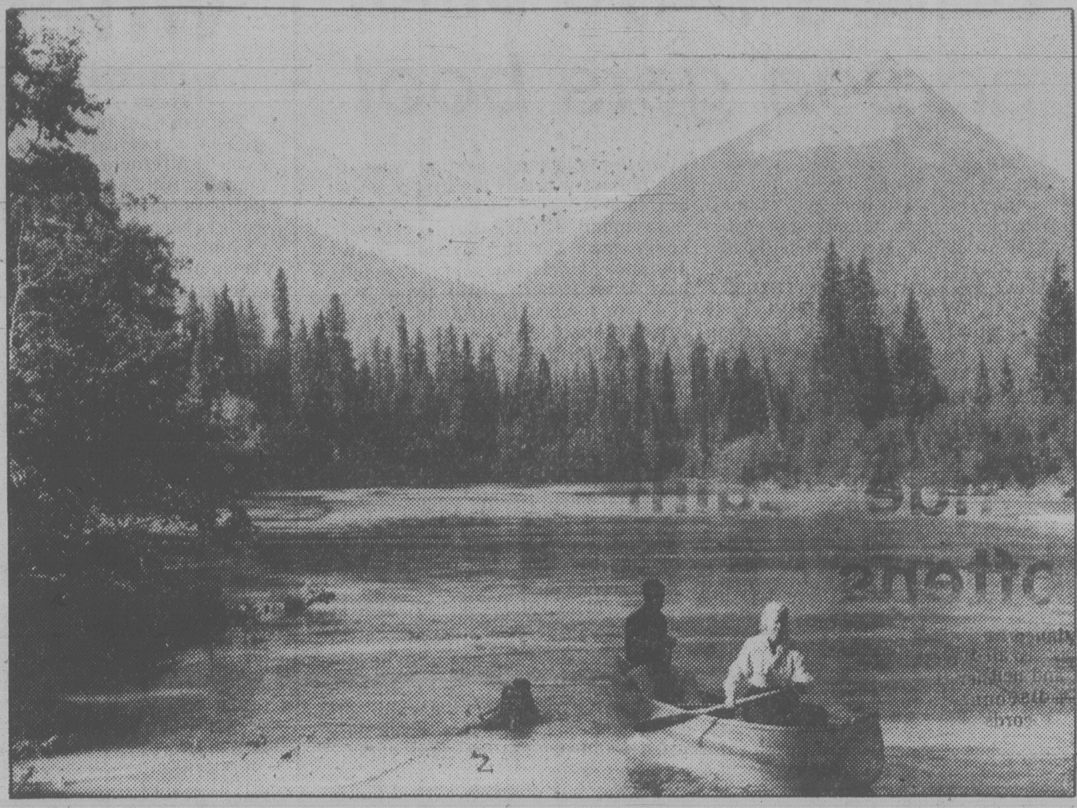
Computer to control wilderness canoes?



UVic student's work may keep Bowron Lake Park from ruin by overcrowding

By MARK HUME
Times Staff

Canoe traffic in one of B.C.'s most popular wilderness parks may soon be regulated by a computer program being set up at the University of Victoria.

Hunched over a desk littered with charts, maps and calculations, Love is setting up a computer program that one day may save Bowron Lake Provincial Park from ruin.

Some wilderness areas are threatened by logging or mining, but Bowron's main problem is simply people — too many of them.

With Love's Wilderness Use Simulation Model (WUSM) park managers hope to maintain the area's quality while at the same time allowing the maximum number of people to use it.

This summer 400 canoeists paddling the loop of lakes, linked by rivers and portages, are carrying with them trip diaries, recording data vital to Love's project.

When his computer model is complete provincial parks managers will be able to plug into the model and determine what effects various management techniques will have on the area.

The WUSM won't tell managers what to do to reduce congestion in the park, stresses Love, but it will tell them what will happen when they try any specific approach.

With the WUSM, planners will be able to test their theories on the computer model, rather than bringing in new regulations on a trial-and-error basis.

The only traffic control in effect at Bowron now is a limit on the size of individual parties. No more than six people are allowed to canoe in a group.

Love, who is funded by the parks branch and the department of labor's Provincial Youth Employment program, says he's the first one in Canada to make use of the WUSM — a method pioneered in the U.S. He hopes to set up a consulting business when he graduates and work on unravelling the traffic jams in parks across the country.

Love said he picked Bowron Lake as his first target because it's one of the most popular canoe areas in the province and is under increasing pressure.

"About 3,500 people used the lakes last summer," said Love. "About 1,100 will use the park in August . . . there can be as many as 60 people (in 10 separate parties) starting out from the trailhead at the same time."

One of the problems, says Love, is that the bulk of the canoeists come from Victoria and Vancouver. To get to the park they generally head off from their homes after work on a Friday, arrive sometime on the weekend, and start their canoe expeditions on Monday morning.

That means people hoping to escape to the wilderness for a week or so could find themselves right in the middle of a flotilla of strangers, all headed in the same direction, with the same destinations and general travel schedule.

So much for the wilderness experience.

Love says research has shown that for most people the wilderness atmosphere is destroyed if they have three or more encounters with other parties in a day.

For the group of 60 that found themselves suddenly together at the Bowron Lake trailhead, there would be no such thing as solitude. Three portage trips are needed to get started on the first lake — that means a total of 180 encounters for each person before the trip has really begun.

Compounding the problem are the natural bottlenecks along the route, where canoeists who have been alone on a large lake are channeled together at camping spots, river mouths or portage points. Again the wilderness atmosphere is ruined by traffic jams in the middle of nowhere.

To make matters worse, says Love, use of the park can only increase in future.

"Despite short-run fluctuation in visitor use within the park, the demand for wilderness will likely continue to increase in the long run. At some point in the future, the fixed supply will be outstripped by demand and direct use controls may be necessay," he says.

Love says you need only look south of the border to see what overcrowding can do to a wilderness area.

Many parks in Canada are already suffering from congestion problems and Love says the federal government has expressed interest in hiring him next year.

TOWN TALK

Environment Minister Rafe Mair is gung ho to take Regional District chairman Murray Glazier up on his suggestion that he go to the Caribbean for a first-hand look at the oil spill off Trinidad-Tobago.

But he says he would have trouble convincing his cabinet colleagues the usefullness of the junket in the midst of the legislative session — especially when the Socreds cling to only a slim majority in the house.

Glazier thinks the trip would give Mair a much better feeling for the environmental impact of an oil spill and then be more firm in his oppositon of the proposed oil port across the strait at Port Angeles.

Mair said the situation is entirely different — an oil spill in the open sea moving out to sea, as opposed to a spill in Juan de Fuca Strait that would be in close quarters.

But if Glazier can convince the NDP to send along an MLA to balance Mair's absence and if the Victoria alderman can convince cabinet to send him, "I'd be delighted to get away from the legislature for a while, especially to Trinidad-Tobago."

That seven-mile traffic jam on Sooke Road Saturday was a headache to many but profitable to officials of All Sooke Day.

After the bills are paid, the loggers' day is expected to net some $12,000 for the Sooke community.

Timing is everything, they say, and Dick and Margie Wilbourn of Pullman, Wash., picked an excellent time to visit Victoria.

When they stepped off the MV Coho on Saturday they were selected tourists of the month by Victoria Jaycees. They won two free nights at a local hotel, plus dinner for two and tickets to local attractions.

They also received a plaque from Ald. Murray Glazier.

When the Naden band of CFB Esquimalt turned out Monday to play for patients at the Memorial Pavilion there was at least one more appreciative listener other than the veterans and hospital staff.

She was Mrs. Winifred Harding, who called Town Talk to say she had asked a member of the band to try to get a concert arranged for the veterans and intended to be there to hear them perform.

At 85, Mrs. Harding visits the chapel at the Memorial Pavilion every Sunday morning.

Anyone interested in a feast and watching sheep dogs do their stuff can indulge themselves Saturday in Ganges.

The Salt Spring Island Farmers' Institute is hosting sheep dog trials at the institute's property on Rainbow Road (which runs past the elementary school), starting at 1:30 p.m. The activity should be easy to spot from the road.

After the trials, Salt Spring lamb (for which the island is famous) will be featured at a barbecue and beer garden that organizers say should start at 3:30 p.m.

That could be what islanders indulgently refer to as "island time", which tends to run a half-hour or so behind the prevailing time elsewhere in the province, so dog fancier-lamb lovers should be prepared to dine at the prevailing island pace and time — leisurely and a little later.

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation will feature Victoria women in their middle years Sunday at 4 p.m. in its program Access.

For 30 minutes the women, all members of Prime Time, will discuss the various problems faced by women in their age group.

Initiated in 1977, Prime Time is a federally-funded project until 1980 that deals with the special problems — such as divorce, widowhood, menopause, unemployment, lack of skills or education — faced by women aged from 35 to 60.

McKinnon enters talks

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon will meet Capital Regional District directors on Saturday to discuss the regional district's bid to build a septic tank dumping station at Macaulay Point.

Meeting with the minister will be regional board chairman Murray Glazier and directors Dave Hill, Howard Sturrock and Charles Perkins.

Meanwhile, Glazier has denied a suggestion by Esquimalt alderman Colin Blair that the dumping of oil at the Millstream Road septage lagoon could be used as a lever to move the facility to defence property at Macaulay Point in Esquimalt.

Glazier said it is a problem of security.

He said there are various compelling reasons why the dump must be moved. One, he said, is the leakage that could occur into the stream just down the hill.

Glazier said there are a number of private wells in the area and continued use of the site might pollute them.

Genstar loses again

Genstar Development Co.'s hopes for a housing development on property it owns in the Tod Inlet area have once again been dashed.

Central Saanich council's subdivision and zoning committee voted Monday night to reject the company's latest plan to build 130 homes on 50 acres it owns west of Wallace Drive.

The matter has now been referred to the next council meeting in two weeks time, but it is doubtful the outcome will change.

He said he is uncertain of the the company's next move.

The company had offered to give the municipality 19 acres of prime waterfront and 20 acres along Tod Inlet if it could get approval for the development.

But the committee members, after a discussion lasting only about 15 minutes, decided to leave the property in its present recreational-commercial designation.

Such a designation would allow for a hotel, motel or golf course but not housing.

In addition the committee proposed changing the zoning on 152 acres of Genstar holdings east of Wallace from estate residential on minimum two to 10 acre lots to recreation-commercial.

Leasehold tax break unlikely

Long-term leasehold property dwellers who don't receive the provincial homeowner's grant aren't likely to get any relief.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Monday basic Social Credit party philosophy doesn't agree with leasing ownership.

The government earlier offered the homeowner's grant (now worth $380) to a number of 99-year-lease properties that qualified under a federal housing program.

But leaseholders who failed to register their 99-year leases before Dec. 31, 1977, or who took over a lease property after that date no longer qualify for the grant.

"The whole object of the homeowner's grant is to encourage home ownership," Vander Zalm said.

"I for one don't want to encourage people leasing. If they can lease they can buy."

The minister said when the province agreed to make the grant available for certain long-term leases, it was not a commitment to accept leases per se and therefore not intended to be an on-going program.

Victoria NDP MLA Charles Barber, who has about one-third of the province's 99-year leasehold units in his riding, says the denial of the grant flies in the face of the Social Credit philosophy.

Such leases are, for all intents and purposes, individually-owned homes, he said.

He thinks it creates two classes of homeowner living side by side in the same building — the one who qualifies for the grant because he applied for it in time and the one who is denied the grant.

Two large complexes — Orchard House on Michigan and Villa Royale on Heywood — contain about 300 leasehold units between them.

Vander Zalm said there are arguments to be made both ways.

"I have some sympathy with them but I'm not prepared to accept leasing as ownership.

"We carefully looked into the pros and cons before deciding."

Large turnout hears plight of refugees

A meeting held at St. John's Anglican Church Monday night to discuss the problem of the boat people was attended by about 150, considerably more than expected.

The meeting, sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association of Victoria, heard immigration officer Gerry Elliot explain the sponsoring program, provincial labor ministry employee Wayne Mullin discuss proposed legislation to create a permanent refugee assistance program, and Pearson College teacher Dr. Wu Chong Tan deal with the cultural needs of the refugees.

Members of the Inter-Cultural Association also outlined the part they will play in setting up an information clearing house, co-ordinating sponsor groups and providing follow-up services for refugees settling here.

The highlight, however, was a brief talk by refugee Ngen Quang, who described his flight from his homeland and the hardships he and his family suffered.

Quang is one of 34 refugees to arrive in the Greater Victoria area in the past three months. All have been sponsored by the federal government with the Sacred Heart Catholic Church parish helping them adjust.

Anyone wishing more information should contact the Inter-Cultural Association, Room 415, 620 View, telephone 388-4728.

Trustees boil over but approve move

It's been on a back burner for about six years but when the old Cloverdale School issue boiled over Monday night, Greater Victoria school board trustees expressed surprise and anger.

Charges of bad planning and panic behavior were hurled but not at anyone in particular. After the smoke cleared, the board approved a motion to move Cloverdale's French immersion program to Quadra Elementary School.

The board had little choice because provincial Fire Commissioner Reg Perkins had ordered the board to either close the 1921 building on the school site or make the alterations necessary to bring it up to fire safety standards.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables told the board it would cost $900,000 to make the necessary renovations to the eight-classroom building. He also said the ministry probably wouldn't approve such renovations, as it would cost only $1.1 million to build a new structure.

The decision to shut the school means that about 175 students in the French program will have to transferred to Quadra, and there are only five weeks in which to accomplish the move. Trustees expressed the fear that many parents will simply register their children in the English program, thus straining the other already-crowded newer building at Cloverdale.

Portable classrooms will be used at Cloverdale and Quadra schools to house the overflows.

In an effort to minimize the problems of relocation, Stables assured the board the school district's administration will launch an information blitz. Parents of children affected by the move will get two letters and one phone call and be invited to two meetings.

Stables said the Cloverdale French program had been well received and the administration wants to keep it active.

"The administration is going to go all out to make the parents and pupils feel comfortable with this move."

Trustee John Young suggested that fire commissioners were thought of as "sacred people" by society, but he wondered if they should be allowed to dictate to the board.

"They've inspected this school twice a year for many years," said Young.

He suggested the fire commissioner should have given the board "fair warning of one, two or three years that the school would be shut down unless improvements were made."

"As a result of this bombshell, this board should express its displeasure with the short notice given by the fire marshal."

Trustee Peter Yorke pointed to the thick sheaf of documents outlining the history of the Cloverdale School problem, which dates back to 1973.

"There was plenty of time; there was a logical progression."

A few Cloverdale parents attended the meeting, but because they were allowed to ask questions only at the beginning of the meeting, they were unable to get into the later board discussion of the issue. Most left after the motion was passed.

Save-water plea made

Ald. Jim Cumming said today a letter will be sent to ratepayers asking for their co-operation in limiting water use, particularly during the late afternoons when the demand is highest.

The letter is expected to be in the mail by the end of the week.

If wasteful practices can be eliminated, water restrictions will not be necessary this year, he said.

Cumming said there is sufficient water available to the system but the problem is distribution.

Homeowners in the southern half the municipality will be amply served when a new 24-inch main line is completed next week, but those in the northern half will continue to encounter problems because the main line there is only eight inches in diameter, insufficient to handle the peak demand periods.

Cumming said homes on higher elevations have been hardest hit by falling pressure.

However, he said, those homeowners should find some relief when the system is connected to a 300,000-gallon booster tank at Pat Bay airport.

Cumming said the use of the tank is a temporary measure.

Eventually the municipality's entire distribution system must be upgraded.

To that end council has approved spending $5,000 for a Capital Region Board study and report.

Break-ins investigated

Police said three apartments were entered after the doors were jimmied open with what appeared to be a screwdriver. In addition there were attempted break-ins into three other apartments.

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Canadians face two to three years of restraint before the Conservative government will be able to clean up a decade of Liberal economic mismanagement, Finance Minister John Crosbie said today.

He could not promise any "economic miracles to change around the Canadian economy overnight," Crosbie added.

The government probably will announce the first of its restraint programs later this week, he said.

Crosbie defended his decision to raise the Bank of Canada's prime lending rate by half a per cent Sunday to a record high of 11.75 per cent, charging that the Liberal government ran the economy out of control and allowed successive bank interest increases.

"In the present situation we had to act quickly and increase the rates. If we hadn't acted, the downward trend on the Canadian dollar would have been hard to stop."

He said the country this year is headed towards a $7-billion deficit in its trade in goods and services with the rest of the world. That would be a sharp increase from the $5.2-billion deficit in the "current account" recorded last year.

The need to keep investment flowing in to offset the chronic current account deficit was cited as a major reason for the move which caused banks and mortgage companies to raise their lending rates.

In spite of the move, which followed a similar rise in U.S. interest rates last week, the dollar dropped more than one-fifth of a cent on currency markets Monday to 85.76 cents U.S.

Canada had a record $3.5-billion surplus in its trade in goods with the rest of the world in 1978. But this was more than offset by payments for services such as shipping, dividend payments to foreigners and spending on foreign travel.

The result was the record $5.2-billion "current account" deficit.

This surplus of Canadian dollars abroad was the major reason for their decline in value. The Bank of Canada used its foreign currency reserves to buy Canadian dollars in an attempt to arrest the decline.

The central bank was forced to arrange loans from domestic and foreign banks to replenish the reserves.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Clark has informed U.S. President Jimmy Carter that in the coming weeks the Canadian government will be announcing the broad lines of its energy program to ensure a "rapid reduction" in Canada's dependence on foreign oil.

The program will move this country "effectively toward energy self-sufficiency," the prime minister assured the president.

"I am confident these measures will enable our country to meet and even improve upon our Tokyo summit goals," he told Carter in a letter made public today.

MPs back Oct. 9

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Clark has decided to call Parliament Oct. 9, giving "the highest possible priority" to legislation to remove secrecy from government operations, Progressive Conservative House Leader Walter Baker announced today.

Another priority for the minority government is reforming the rules of Parliament so MPs will have more power to bring the government to account, Baker said.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer will open the 31st Parliament when he delivers his first throne speech, outlining the legislative program of the first Conservative government since John Diefenbaker's administration was defeated in 1963.

"We will be able to say to Parliament, for the first time in a long time, 'these are the bills we intend to introduce'," Baker said.

He said economic legislation would be near the top of the list, but that the government did not intend immediately to introduce a bill to abolish Petro-Canada, a Conservative proposal during the campaign for the May 22 election.

Liberal House Leader Allan MacEachen criticized the government for delaying the opening of Parliament

It's the last chance to mail entries for the Great Inner Tube Race which will take place Sunday in the Gorge.

All entries should be in the mailbox by midnight tonight in order to guarantee delivery in time.

Entries can continue to be brought in, in person, to the Victoria Times, or to a participating sporting goods or hardware store until close of business Wednesday. Some locations will be able to receive entries up to collection time which is Thursday noon.

Downtown - Ray's Sports Centre, 1692 Douglas.

Oak Bay - Oak Bay Sporting Goods, 2077 Oak Bay.

Gorge - Premier Sports & Cycle, 2965 Tillicum.

Colwood, Langford - Alexander's Sporting Goods, 2244 Sooke.

Sooke - Westbrook Sooke Hardware, 2038 Otter Point.

Sidney - Harvey's Sporting Goods, 7485 Beacon.

The race is in three sections: men, women and mixed. Trophies for first, second, and third are presented in each section.

There will be a parade of contestants immediately before the race and parade trophies are also awarded in three categories: men, women and mixed.

Spectators will get a good view of the race either at the finish line or from the park across the Gorge. Because race markers will force contestants far to the left, there will be a close-up view for spectators along Gorge Road.

Check-in time for contestants at Gorge Park is noon. The parade begins from the finish line at 12:30 p.m. The parade ends at Craigflower Bridge, which is the starting point for the race. Races start about 1:15 p.m.

NDP MP harbors refugee

VANCOUVER (CP) — An NDP member of Parliament said Monday he will harbor a Chilean refugee in his home against federal government attempts to deport him.

Burnaby MP Svend Robinson said the immigration department is preparing to seize Galindo Madrid and fly him to the east coast to rejoin the ship he abandoned two years ago.

"I am confident that there will be no attempts to violate the sanctity of my home," said Robinson.

He said immigration officials were planning to seize Madrid Monday but he heard of the attempt and extracted a promise from the immigration department that nothing would be done until noon today.

Immigration officials were going to fly Madrid to St. John's, Nfld. to join the Greek freighter Star Pride which he fled in Squamish, B.C., in March, 1977, Robinson said.

Since then Madrid has made repeated attempts to gain political refugee status but all have been refused including a final appeal to the Federal Court of Appeal.

He has been working in a downtown restaurant as a dishwasher and living in Vancouver's West End.

Madrid told a news conference that he fears for his life if he is sent to Chile where he was an active supporter of deposed Socialist President Salvador Allende.

Explosion rips trailer

A Winnipeg family of three is in hospital with multiple burns following an explosion this morning at the KOA campground at the foot of Mount Newton Crossroad in Central Saanich.

Gilbert Blais, a CNR railroad employee, was lighting a propane stove in his 18-foot trailer when the explosion occurred at about 10 a.m.

Blais and his teen-age son feld from the trailer while other campers rescued Blais' wife, Margaret, and the family poodle.

Fire hazard idles 1,700

About 1,700 Vancouver Island loggers have been idled as a result of tinder-dry forests.

MacMillan Bloedel spokesman Doug Coupar said today operations at Kelsey Bay, Chemainus and Shawnigan Lake have been shut down.

Two other operations — Sproat Lake and Northwest Bay — have been put on early shift to keep the loggers out of the woods during the hottest part of the day.

About 800 MacBlo employees have been idled.

Nearly 400 B.C. Forest Products employees are off the job as the company has been forced to partially close operations at Renfrew and Caycuse.

A BCFP spokesman said some of the workers are being kept busy on road work and other jobs out of the woods.

He said so far nobody is complaining about the time off work.

"The guys like a little holiday," he said.

However, if the weather continues hot for more than three weeks, then the loggers will begin complaining, he added.

About 125 Rayonier of Canada employees at Jordan River and Gordon River have also been idled.

Meanwhile, B.C. forest fires continue to take their toll, burning more than 9,500 hectares so far this year.

Provincial protection officer Arnold Ginnever said the Kamloops area was hardest hit by the number of fires, with about 700 compared to about 200 at this time last year.

However, he said most of the damage was done in the Prince George area and fires there claimed more than two-thirds of the total timber burned in the province.

More than one thousand men and a battery of equipment, including cats, skidders, helicopters and air tankers, continue to fight the more than 370 fires still burning.

Meanwhile, about 1,400 hectares of bush are burning a few miles west of the Okanogan Valley in Washington state.

About 500 men are fighting the blaze and another 300 firefighters are being brought in from Idaho to check the fire which apparently started in a garage on government land.

Ginnever said all B.C. fires are under control but about six or seven continue to cause crews difficulty and the fire hazard in the Interior is rated extreme with campfire bans still in effect.

Vander Zalm softens stand

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm today tried to play down the cabinet stir he caused Monday by revealing details of the new auto insurance scheme that will end discriminatory rates.

The minister had detailed plans of the Insurance Corp. of B.C. to soften the impact of the loss of revenue that will be created when bad drivers have their records wiped clean so everyone in B.C. will pay the same insurance premium next year.

But today he softened his position, saying he was simply voicing his own opinion based on a common sense analyses of the new legislation.

"I said there would not be a substantial increase in rates next year. I don't think there will be. I was concerned that some headlines last week were giving the impression there would be," he said.

"I was asked if ICBC had enough funds to cover the anti-discrimination program. I said that if ICBC had a good year it would probably have a good surplus of between $15 million and $20 million and common sense dictates that it be used to keep the rates down as low as possible.

"I said that in my opinion safe driver discounts should be discontinued but I didn't say that would be policy.

"It just wouldn't make any sense to keep them going if safe drivers were being compensated by lower rates anyway," he said.

The earlier comments made to a Times reporter and a radio reporter were much stronger and apparently landed the controversial minister in hot water.

The new legislation designed to end all discrimination — age, sex, marital status and geographic location — was introduced in the house last week by deputy premier Grace McCarthy who has responsibility for the government-controlled insurance corporation.

At her press conference, however, reporters were dissatisfied with the meagre details she divulged.

Vander Zalm told the Times on Monday the press had the wrong impression when they reported rates would increase next year as the new program comes on stream.

He said other than normal inflation rates won't go up and explained the fund that will ease any increases over the next five years.

He also said the common

Times News Services

Israeli troops crossed seven kilometres into south Lebanon today on a search-and-destroy mission for Palestinian guerrillas and blew up a house occuped by suspected terrorists.

The attack came in the wake of strong U.S. condemnation of Israeli air strikes against southern Lebanese targets Sunday in which 18 people were reported killed and 50 others injured.

Israeli jets prowled Lebanese skies again Monday but did not attack, while its long-range artillery pounded the battle-scarred south.

Meanwhile, an Israeli foreign ministry spokesman said today that "very intensive contacts" were continuing between Israeli and U.S. representatives to try to reach a compromise solution on the problem of the expiring mandate of the UN peacekeeping force in the Sinai.

The United States Monday took issue with Israel's rejection of a proposal to replace UN Emergency Force peace-keeping troops in the Sinai with lesser-grade UN observers. Israel rejected Washington's complaint.

The differences between Washington and Tel Aviv became public Monday in a series of statements and meetings:

— U.S. State Department spokesman Hodding Carter III read a statement which strongly condemned Israeli raids on Palestinian positions Sunday. The department said the raids were killing and wounding innocent victims and raising the potential for more violence in the Middle East.

— Israeli Ambassador to the U.S. Ephraim Evron told reporters after a State Department meeting, "The policy of the Israeli government is quite clear. We will do everything possible in our self-defence."

— Evron also told reporters the United States has a commitment, as part of the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, to find an alternative to the UN Expeditionary Force.

The expeditionary force was supposed to have been the principal buffer between the withdrawing Israeli forces and the Egyptian army in the phased return of the Sinai peninsula, but the Soviets have said they would veto the continuation of the force because they object to the treaty itself.

In a related development, the U.S. defence department has taken a major step toward restoring the mobility and firepower of Egypt's army with U.S.-made equipment.

At the same time, the Pentagon plans to strengthen Israel's armored and artillery forces.

Parker puts his foot down

MONTREAL (CP) — It seems you can't even put your foot down these days without somebody running over it.

Take this argument over a downtown Montreal parking spot.

Police said it all began Monday when a man and his wife spied a yawning parking space and decided it was more convenient than the one where they had already left their car.

But a second driver happened along and, ignoring the woman's protests, began jockeying his car into the space.

The first man raced back to assert his rights, but the adamant driver responded by driving over his foot, pinning his toes to the ground. The prisoner pounded so hard on the windshield that it cracked.

The driver went off to find a policeman, who ordered him to remove his car from the other man's foot and told both to find different parking spaces.

Culture Minister David MacDonald blurted a startled "you've got to be kidding" today when reporters asked if he plans to follow Iran's lead and ban the broadcasting of music.

He then laughingly added it must have been the effects of the summer heat that prompted the Ayatollah Khomeini to ban music on grounds it is no different than opium.

"It is really hard to say anything that is more extreme than the position the ayatollah has taken," said MacDonald.

He brushed off a tongue-in-cheek suggestion that Canada should press Iran to lift the music ban to open the market for the sales of Canadian recordings.

"We have enough trouble getting the circulation of Canadian music in Canada let alone worrying about sales in Iran," MacDonald said as he left to consider more weighty affairs of state at a cabinet meeting.

'Sheer hell' ends for U.S. yachtsman

FALMOUTH (UPI) - American yachtsman Gerry Spiess today sailed his 10-foot "Yankee Girl" into Falmouth Harbor, completing a 54-day solo crossing of the North Atlantic in the smallest boat ever to complete such a journey.

Spiess, a 39-year-old engineer from White Bear Lake, Minn., arrived at the centre of a welcoming flotilla of honking, tooting pleasure boats that had sailed out to escort him the last few miles to the Cornish coast. Thousands of cheering spectators lined the shores.

Spiess, who left Virginia Beach, Va., June 1, survived two weeks of "sheer hell" during which 20-foot waves pounded the tiny homemade sailboat. He was once swept overboard and only his lifeline saved him.

"Gee I'm glad to be on land again," Spiess said as he emerged from the cockpit of the Yankee Girl dressed in a white sweater and neatly pressed slacks. He appeared a little unsteady on his feet and leaned on his wife, who he greeted with a quick hug, as they were jostled by hordes of reporters and well-wishers.

Spiess stepped ashore just before 9 a.m PDT and went immediately to the local yacht club.

The mayor of Falmouth, Mrs. Olive Smith, prepared to host a reception for Spiess at the Royal Cornwall Yacht Club.

The previous record was set in July 1966, when boatbuilder Bill Verity, of Fort Lauderdale, Florida, crossed to Fenit in southwest Ireland in the 12-foot sailing boat "Nonoalca" in 65 days.

Spiess' wife, Sally, 37, and his parents Louis and Jeanette Spiess, sailed out this morning to greet the Yankee Girl. Spiess leaned out of the boat to kiss his wife and said he was not tired after his long journey.

Today's Markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was mixed in moderate mid-afternoon trading Today.

Among the 14 stock groups within the composite index, paper and forest products led the nine gainers while real estate and construction had the largest of the five declines.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said shares of Highfield Property Investments Ltd. of Calgary will be posted for trading for the first time in the industrial category at the opening Aug. 3. About 4.40 million shares will be listed, of which 3.83 million are issued and outstanding.

Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were down in active trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume to 11:01 a.m. was 1,586,175 shares.

MacMillan Bloedel led trading in the industrials, remaining unchanged at $28 on 7,100 shares. Northway Gestalt was unchanged at $1.55 on 2,200, Potter Distillers A remained steady at $1.75 on 2,000 and Pagurian Corp. was unchanged at $4.50 on 1,740. Webb and Knapp was unchanged at $1.45 and Austin Investment remained steady at .80.

On the resource and development board, New Cinch Uranium was down .30 at $4.45 on 63,700. Amber Resources gained .03 at $1.70 on 32,400, Hallmark Resources was down .07 at .37 on 26,000 and Zenore Resources dropped .01 at .09 on 21,500. Colby Mines gained .05 at $1.30 and Redford Mines gained .01 at $1.14.

Cherokee Development led trading on the curb exchange, gaining .01½ at .47 on 108,000. Neptune Resources gained .35 at $2.65 on 40,832, Ascot Petroleum was up .02 at $1.32 on 22,500 and Rebel Developments was up .01 at .20 on 10,000. Canzona Minerals dropped .01 at .44 and Gold Sham was down ½ at .07.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market staged a moderate rally today, overcoming continuing concerns over the outlook for the U.S. dollar and interest rates.

Gainers held a 9-to-5 lead over losers in the mid-afternoon tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Gold prices rose to above $306 an ounce in London today and the U.S. dollar remained on the defensive in foreign-exchange markets.

Analysts noted some disappointment over that trend, which came despite an increase in the Federal Reserve Board's discount rate late last week to a record 10 per cent.

Along with that increase in the charge the Reserve sets on loans to its member commercial banks, open-market money rates have been rising against late.

National Airlines led the active list, up ⅛ to $49⅝ in trading that included blocks of 500,000 and 100,000 shares at $49⅞. On Monday Pan American World Airways, one of several companies that wants to take over National, said it bought more than 900,000 National shares.

Xerox picked up ⅝ to $60⅞. The company posted second quarter profits of $1.90 a share, up from $1.59 in the comparable period last year.

The NYSE's composite common-stock index added .27 to 58.04.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market was little changed near the close of light trading today.

Industrials were lower, oils mixed and golds unchanged.

Cattle

CALGARY (CP) — Receipts to 11 a.m. MDT today at the Calgary public stockyards totalled 825 head, consisting of a light supply of all classes with trade dull from a narrow local demand.

A1-2 slaughter steers traded $2 lower while A1-2 slaughter heifers traded from 50 cents to $1 lower. Slaughter cows opened $1 lower and by mid-morning had dropped a full $4. Slaughter bulls were trading barely steady with the largest percentage selling at the lower end of quotations.

A1-2 slaughter steers over 1,000 pounds 72-74.10. A1-2 slaughter heifers over 850 pounds 68-71. D1-2 cows 49-51, D3-5 46-49. Good bulls 68-70.

Feeder cattle receipts were composed of mostly shortkeep feeder steers, which sold $2 lower. One package of 500-600-pound feeders traded at 87.25.

SOUTH OAK BAY

Quality construction and craftmanship not usually found in modern construction. This is a lovely almost new home with the charm of tradition. Cozy living room and large separate dining room both with hardwood floors. Sunny kitchen with eating area opening to large western exposure deck for the family barbeques. R-20 insulation, wood-burning stove in den and thermopane windows throughout make this ideal for saving energy. The vendors have been transferred and are unhappy to leave their ideal home. Asking $123,000 and MUST be sold.
